When I became interested in the origin of the town of Webberville and the Manor Cemetery, the first book I turned to was The Evolution of a State, or Recollections of old Texas Days by Noah Smithwick. This book was compiled by his daughter Nanna Smithwick Donaldson and published by Gammel Book Co. of Austin, TX in 1900. My copy was a gift from John T. McColl to my father and his first wife Lillian Manor in 1916. John T. McColl had come to Travis Co., TX with my grandfather Hugh McLaurin in 1868 from Marlboro Co., SC. Hugh had apparently received glowing reports of life in Travis Co. from his great uncle Lauchlin McLaurin, brother in law of Reuben Hornsby.

Smithwick's first reference to Webber's Prarie is on page 224, "In the latter part of 1839 I took unto myself a helpmeet and established a home on a farm in the lower end of Webber's prarie, whither had preceded me my old time partner, 'Dr.' John F. Webber. He having retired from the practice of medicine, built the first house, a fort in the prarie, which bears his name. Other settlers collected around the pioneer cabin, among whom were the Dutys, the next to locate. There were five brothers of them, Joseph, the only one who had a family, William, Matthew, George and Richard. Joseph and George Duty were among Austin's first three hundred, and located their headrights lower down on the Colorado, but, like many others sold out to later arrivals and pushed out into the Indian country. They, also, had built a fort into which were gathered all the families in the vicinity, the men going out in companies to work their farms and kill their meat, and incidently Indians. Washington Anderson was there, and with him his father, Dr. Anderson, a noted physician all through the country. There were the Hamiltons, four brothers - Alexander, William, James and John; Dan Shelf, James Dodd, the Manors, Joseph and James; Mrs. Scott and her daughter, Mrs. Hopkins and perhaps a few others.....But, to return to Webber's prarie. When the mail route up to Austin was opened we were allowed an office in Webber's prarie. I was appointed postmaster, with a certain percentage of all the money I took in to pay me for my trouble. That was long before the advent of postage stamps, and the charge for letters was twenty-five cents, payable at either end of the line. Letters were consequently few and far between. An occasional newspaper strayed into the office and did duty for the whole neighborhood."

The Handbook of Texas, Volume II, published 1952 by The Texas State Historical Association has this on page 875: " Webberville, Texas. Webberville, a rural community in eastern Travis County, was founded in 1839 and called Webber's Prarie, for John Webber, the first settler. A fort to protect early settlers from Indian raids was located at the present site of the village. In 1851, Colonel John Banks bought the land from Webber and established a plantation, on part of which he laid out a townsite. By-passed by the railroad, the town failed to grow. Two stores and a population of fifty made up the settlement in 1948." It is certainly fitting that Mary Standifer's daughter, Mary Manor Standifer, is currently with the Texas State Historical Association and is working on a complete revision of The Handbook of Texas.

John Holmes Jenkins, III, published Recollections of Early Texas in 1958, and I have an autographed copy. This book has a writeup on James Manor and his brother Joseph, which notes that Joseph settled at Webber's Prarie and opened a 'grocery', which included a saloon, and it was called 'Hell's Half Acre'. The town of Manor is named for James. There is a page article on the scalping of Claiborn Osborn by Indians in 1840 at Rice's Crossing on Brushy Creek in Williamson Co. The party of ten had left the house of William Hamilton (who had married Louisa Osborn). The party included John Lyle Osborn and Alexander and James Hamilton. Claiborn was taken initially to the home of Noah Smithwick at Webberville and later to his sister's home for his treatment and recovery. Claiborn lived 59 years after his scalping and reared ten children. James Standifer is also written up. He and his mother received land grants on the Bastrop-Travis Co. line. Jenkins refers to happenings in and near Webberville in the book. On p. 202, he says: "Capt. John J. Grumbles was a ranger captain in the 1840's and 1850's. He lived first at Webber's Prarie and then bought the William Barton home and mill. Grumbles died in 1859." On p. 57, it is noted that an Indian fight took place near Webberville on the Colorado on Feb 18, 1839. In this skirmish, Albert Coleman killed four Indians before he was killed.

In 1963, Mary Starr Barkley published the first comprehensive History of Travis County and Austin 1839-1899. On pages 3 and 4 there is a good writeup on Webberville. "Continuing on Farm Road 969, one reaches Webberville, with its Ebenezer Baptist Church on the left. On the church grounds, in its setting of cactus and prickly pear, with an iron fence around it, is the tall tombstone of Milton Duty, son of Joseph William Duty, born on Feb 2, 1836. Webberville was originally called Webber's Prarie; it was a sizeable frontier village, with the log cabins of John Webber; Noah Smithwick; Washington Anderson and his father Dr. Thomas Anderson; the Hamiltons, Alexander, James, John, William; James Dodd; James and Joseph Manor; and the Dutys, George, Joseph, Matthew, Richard, and William. Mary of these first settlers died early; Joseph Duty who died in about 1855 is buried on the hill in the old Manor cemetery; Matthew Duty was killed by Indians; and George Duty also was dead before 1837 ended. Webber's Prarie later became known as Hell's Half Acre, and Webber lived there until about 1851, when he sold the land to Colonel Banks and left, following an unfortunate marriage. It was Banks who planned the town of Webberville. After the Civil War, the property became Aaron Burleson's, who married Jane Tannehill, daughter of Jesse C. Tannehill. Aaron Burleson settled at the mouth of Walnut Creek in 1838 and lived in the Austin area until he died at his home near Govalle on January 13, 1855. Tannehill settled in 1839 on land adjoining Austin on the east, called Montopolis, near old Fort Prarie, and logs from old Fort Coleman were used to build his log cabin, where he died on March 18, 1863. Dr. Thomas Anderson served his neighbors in Travis Co. as their first doctor until Dr. J. S. Robertson came and rode the riverfront on horseback, serving the settlers. Noah Smithwick who lived at Webberville then, was at old Fort Coleman too, and left the area at the time of the Civil War. It was he who wrote much of the material about early Travis Co. He was born on Jan 1, 1808 in North Carolina, came to Texas in 1827, and was married to the widow Duty." On page 34, it is noted that "In 1844, James Manor and Frank Nash had trouble with Indians stealing horses at the store near Webberville." On page 272, it is noted that in 1870, the ferry at Webberville across the Colorado was run by F. L. and K. K. Rector.

In A History of Texas and Texans, vol. II, published 1914 by The American Historical Society, page 803 is this data on Webberville: "in 1839 the state capital was located in Austin, and on Jan 25, 1840, the Texas Congress passed an act creating Travis Co. from Bastrop Co..... Outside of Austin the principal settlements in 1859 were Webberville, Merriltown and Parsons Seminary. Webberville had a population of about two hundred, two churches, two schools, five stores, a hotel and debating society. .... "

Perhaps the best writeup on Webberville is on pp. 320-322 of Austin Colony Pioneers, published 1949 by Worth S. Ray. This book was reprinted in 1970. He starts the article thus: "In 1828, Lehman Barker and family, and Josiah Wilbarger, his son in law, came to Austin's Little Colony, and built what was then called a 'Fort', some five or six miles north of where Bastrop was later located .... In 1831 Edward Burleson was granted a tract of land east of (the Wilbarger Fort) ..... The real frontier of the 'Little Colony' was the home or Fort of Reuben Hornsby and his family in the 'bend' of the Colorado..... It was at Hornsby's Fort that the 'Tumlinson Rangers' were organized to go after the Indians. Sometime after the battle of San Jacinto, when the participants in the scrimmage began to drift back to their homes, a certain so-called 'Dr' John F. Webber, built the first house on 'Webber's Prarie', between Hornsby's and Bastrop.... Soon Webber's Prarie collected quite a settlement,early settlers nearer Bastrop selling out, and moving higher up, to join the Webbers. Chief among these families were the five Duty brothers, the Andersons, Hamiltons, Dan Shelf, Jim Dodd, Joe and Jim Manor, Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Hopkins, the Whites, Sanders, Baileys, McDuffs (afterwards to Elgin), Browns, Woods, Hills, Faucetts and Banks ..... "

"In 1839, Noah Smithwick says he moved into the Webberville settlement and by that time the place was given a town name of Webberville, after the original settler. Then a postoffice by the name was established there, and Smithwick became the postmaster while Peter Carr became the mail carrier. Smithwick tells the story this way: 'It was, I think, in 1840, that the little village of Webberville was started by the opening of a store, of which Joe Manor and Frank Nash were the proprietors. After a time the 'grocery' was added (meaning the saloon), and the place became notorious. Parkerson called the place 'Hell's Half Acre.' a name which appeared so appropriate that it became generally adopted, being shortened by decapitation to 'Half Acre'.

"The community at 'Half Acre' was augmented by the advent of one Lyman Wight, and his colony of Mormons, who were looking for some place to light in Texas. They remained at Webberville for a year or so and then moved on into Austin, after it became the capital of the State, and therefore better prepared to defend against the Indians.... Manor & Nash not only ran a mercantile business for this thriving settlement, but either they, themselves, or others for them conducted other lines of business calculated to gather in the coin of the realm. Here was the embodiament of the wild west town, located on the open prarie, and largely free from interference by a local constabluary, and practically run wide open in accordance with the modern idea. People on the frontier, like people everwhere else in the world demanded a certain amount of social freedom, and thought it was necessary to happiness. Every man stood firmly together for the protection of their homes, from merauding Indians or other loose elements, but there were no blue laws in force in the town of Webberville, to hamstring the young emigrant who wanted to heve a good time....

"It was not far to Hornsby's bend, and the young men of that family were generally sober and industrious and Aunt Sallie was a powerful influence for good in that section. Then, too, there were some of those Hornsby boys that it wouldn't do to fool with, as had been demonstrated on several occasions. Aaron Burleson, brother of Gen. Edward Burleson, was another man that it was better not to cross. Another Aaron Burleson got to be sheriff of Bastrop Co., and he too, had a dangerous reputation..... He lived some ten or twelve miles below Bastrop on the west side of the river.

"There was a little church finally built in the town, and now and then brother John Haynie, or Uncle Jimmie Gilleland, before he was killed by the Indians, would come along and preach to the folks of Webberville. There is still a little church there.

"But Joe Manor, who had fought the Indians years before and served also as a ranger, with his partner, Frank Nash, continued to keep what had been Webber's Prarie alive, even after the town of Austin began to build itself into a reel Capital of the State of Texas, which in 1845, superseded the Republic. I have personally talked to men who knew this town of Webberville in those long gone days. There has been a Manor's Store in the place ever since Manor & Nash opened the first one in 1840. Webberville is now practically extinct. Less than ten years ago this writer (Worth S. Ray) was present at the burial of the last Manor in the old Manor Cemetery on the hill, who was of the older tribe of this family. He was a fine man."

Below is a drawing which appeared in Austin Colony Pioneers.

THE TOWN OF WEBBERVILLE IN THE OLD DAYS -- SHERIFF BURLESON COMES TO TOWN

James R. Duty sent me a copy of what he excerpted from the Annals of Travis County back in 1985 at the Barker Historical Library at the University of Texas. Frank Brown was the keeper of the Archives of Travis Co.,TX for many years. Most of the work appeared to have been done between 1897 and 1903 from available city and county records and newspapers. It is not a published book, but has been bound and copies are on file in the Barker Library and the Texas State Library. I will excerpt from the notes James R. Duty made where they refer to Webberville events or events relating to people in the Webberville and Hornsby Bend area.

Chapter V (1837), p. 18. Matthew Duty and Wm. Hornsby, "Sometime this year, a small party of white men, including Matthew Duty and William Hornsby, were surprised by a large party of Indians. All of the whites were well mounted except Hornsby. The Indians being so much more numerous than the whites, the latter ran away, except Matthew Duty, who was resolved to stand by Hornsby in his perilous situation, the latter being unable to flee rapidly. Duty dropped in the rear of Hornsby and turned on the pursuers, presenting his gun, when the Indians fell back. At this juncture, Hornsby retreated. Wheeling, Duty also ran, still,however, keeping himself between Hornsby and the Indians. The latter then began to crowd the two retreating white men, when Duty again turned and, presenting his gun, kept them back. These tactics were pursued until the entire party safely reached the fort at Hornsby's.
"It is related that Mrs. Hornsby, mother of William, stood at the gate of the fort, and beheld the race across the prarie between the pursuing savages and the two retreating white men, every moment anticipating the death of her son and Mr. Duty.
"Matthew Duty was afterwards killed by an Indian from ambush, at Webber's Prarie. He fell from his horse he was riding, the same one he rode when retreating with Hornsby from the Indians, as related above.
"A short time after this, Joseph Duty was taking a ride on the same horse, when he was shot at by Indians. The bullet struck the horse, but Duty escaped into a thicket. Indians were not inclined to pursue a man under cover, with gun in hand, nor would they often charge a small party of well armed whites, so long as they stood with presented arms."

James Goacher, "James Goacher was a native of Alabama. He emigrated to Texas at an early day. He opened the first traveled trace to Austin's upper colony.... Goacher settled in what is now Bastrop County."

Chapter V (1837, p. 27. Joseph Rogers "Joseph Rogers imigrated to Texas in the early 30's and settled on the Colorado about ten miles above Bastrop. In the fall of 1837, Rogers, Craft, and a stranger, whose name is unknown, went to the fort on Walnut Creek, now called Fort Prarie, six miles east of Austin, for the purpose of procuring ammunition for the settlers below. They accomplished their mission, and had gone about five miles on their return, when at Hornsby's Bend, they were charged upon by two parties of Indians, one coming up behind, and the other on their right. The Indians were close up before they were aware of their presence.

"The men were in open prarie, where there was no chance of defence. They sought safety in flight. All but Rogers succeeded in escaping. The savages were well mounted. Rogers was on a poor animal. They soon overtook and killed him. While being pursued he threw away the ammunition to prevent the Indians from getting it. They also ran Mr. Craft several miles but failed to capture him.

"The Indians then went to the residence of Reuben Hornsby, who was at work on his farm. They attempted to cut him off from the house, and would have done so had not his son, who had seen the Indians approaching, ran to him with a fleet horse. This enabled him to escape.

"A Mrs. Harrell, who lived near Hornsby, seeing the Indians coming, took her two little sons and a niece and fled to the river bottom, and remained concealed there until they left. These Indians were pursued by the soldiers at the fort, but they were not overtaken. Mr. Rogers left a wife and several children. He was an uncle of Ed. and J. B. Rogers, prominent citizens of Travis Co., and was father of Joe Rogers who lived on Onion dreek many years."

(Note by Banks McLaurin,Jr.: Family #14 in the 1860 census of Travis Co., TX is that of James Rogers, 45, b. TN with wife Rachel, 57, b. TN, and sons Edward, 23, b. TX and Joseph, 20, b. TX and a Mary Edmenson, age 13, b. TX. This certainly fits the above family, and the Mary Edmenson must be Mary Ann Edmiston, daughter of James Euwin Edmiston, whose mother died on the way to California in 1849 and who was sent back to live in Austin.)

Chapter VI (1839), p. 64."Cotton Gin It was announced this fall that Joseph Duty, living at Webber's Prarie, had purchased a cotton gin. It is believed that this was the first one ever brought to the upper Colorado."

Chapter VI (1839), p. 68. "Webber's Prarie This year, (1839), there were residing at Webber's Prarie, Noah Smithwick, John F. Webber, five brothers named Duty, known respectively as Joseph, William, Matthew, George and Richard; Washington Anderson; his father Dr. Thomas Anderson; four brothers named Hamilton, known as Alexander, William, James and John; Daniel Shelt, James Dodd, Joseph and James Manor; Mrs. Scott, and her daughter, Mrs. Hopkins. It is believed that James Caeser and Crawford Edminston were also there at this time. There were perhaps a few others in the vicinity."

"These settlers had built a fort into which were gathered all the families of the neighborhood, when an alarm was given. This was probably Fort Coleman, on Coleman branch, at the lower end of the prarie, though Webber built one at his home, near the river bluff, where the village of Webber now stands. While the women and children were housed together in a fort, the men went out in a body to till their small farms, kill game for meat and to hunt Indians when necessary."

(Note by B.McL: The Mrs. Scott and her daughter Mrs. Hopkins are Martha Duty Scott and Dicey Scott Hopkins. Dicey is the head of family #8, Travis Co., 1850. Daniel Shelt is undoubtedly Daniel C. Shelf, who m. Louvina Scott, daughter of J. and Martha Duty Scott, and a sister of Dicey Hopkins. Another daughter, Lavinia Scott, m. John Hamilton, III who is one of the four Hamiltons mentioned on the preceeding page. The Daniel C. Shelf family lived next door to Dicey Hopkins in 1850.)

Chapter VI (1839), p. 69. John F. Webber John F. Webber, as stated elsewhere, was the first settler at the prarie. He built his cabin where the river makes a short turn to the south east, near the place where the first dwelling of John B. Banks was afterwards erected. Webber was represented as being an honest, conscientious man, well liked by his neighbors, but on account of an unfortunate matrimonial alliance, he became a sort of social outcast. This marital condition was perfectly legal under Mexican law; but he was severly condemned by many, and it rendered his continuance in Texas unpleasant and subjected him to much criticism. He bravely faced the situation, however. Webber built a fort and took his family into it. He was hospitable, generous, and charitable and the destitute and afflicted always found a welcome at his house and fort. On account of the contumely that was directed towards him, he finally sold out and went to Mexico, where there were no social distinctions. It was in 1851 that Webber sold his possessions to Col. Banks.

"Col. John B. Banks came from Washington County to Webber's prarie where he opened up a large farm, and shortly afterwards laid out the town on the river front called Webberville. The village became a flourishing one, and continued prosperous until the arrival of the Western Branch via Manor to Austin, when it ceased to grow. It is surrounded by a rich and growing country; the people are intelligent, educated, and hospitable. After the close of the civil war, Col. Banks sold his plantation to the late Aaron Burleson and removed to Galveston where he died several years later. Col. Banks was a member of the legislature from Travis Co. in 1853."

(Note by B.McL.: John F. Webber heads family #42 in Travis Co. 1850, age 64, b. VT. His wife Silvia is age 43, b. FL, and "black". The children are listed as "mulattos".)

Chapter VI (1839), p. 72 "The Fall term of the district court met Dec 7 .... Grand Jury empanneled: ... Abner Cook (B.McL. comment: He was the architect for the Governor's Mansion, and the contractor for the Old Main Building of the Univ. of TX.) Aaron Burleson, ... James Manor, John Hamilton .... Petit Jury: J. P. Webber, Joseph Duty, ... Wm. Hornsby ....."

Chapter X (1843), p. 169. "The fall term of the district court met Sept. 4, Judge R. E. B. Baylor presiding (Baylor Univ. is named for him and he is a distant cousin of mine on the Bledsoe line since Thomas Banks, father of John B. Banks, married a Bledsoe.) .... Joseph Duty, ..." (B.McL. comment in ())

Chapter XV (1851), p. 23. "In the county court, Feb 17, the following overseers of roads were appointed: ..... Jo. Hornsby, ... Joseph J. Manor .... It was ordered that John Hamilton Joseph Duty, Joseph J. Manor, Geo. A. Gamble and George D. Glasscock view a road through Webber's Prarie."

"August 18, The following patrolls were appointed: .... John B. Banks, ..."

Chapter XV (1852), p. 50. "Feb 16, in the county court, the following overseers of roads were appointed: ... William W. Hornsby, ... Patrols: Jesse F. Burditt, ... Jo Hornsby, ... A. B. Burleson, ... John B. Banks, Frank Duty, ... James Rogers, ... "

Chapter XVI (1854), p. 48. "F. W. Duty - Died August 22, Mr. F. W. Duty, an old citizen of Travis County. His death occurred about eighty miles west of El Paso, while on a trip overland to California. He was accompanied by his sister and several friends. His grave marked by an ox yoke, with name and day of death placedon it."

Chapter XVII (1855), p. 20. "Joseph Duty - Joseph Duty an old citizen of Travis County, residing near Webberville, died on the 10th of August (should read September), from the effects of a snake bite. He was a mile from home when he received the wound. He ran as rapidly as he could, but upon reaching home was hardly able to articulate. Remedies were applied without avail. The bite was on the leg above the foot, by a large rattlesnake. Joseph Duty was one of Austin's colonists and came to the present Travis County about the year 1830. He was a well-known, useful, and patriotic Citizen."

Note: When I was in Austin, I visited the Austin History Center and found a copy of Brown's Annals, and can add a few items of interest in the study of Webberville history.

Chapter VI (1839) p. 82. Aaron Burleson, m. Jane Tannehill. She was born in Bastrop Co. in 1833 and died 17 Apr 1898 in Travis Co.

Chapter XI. (1844) p. 9. Joseph Manor came to Travis Co. 1839 and settled at Webberville. In 1844 he went into partnership with Frank Nash. (Note: This should read "Joseph John Manor".)
p. 17. Dr. James W. Robertson was Mayor of Austin in 1844. (He had a son who m. a Hornsby.)
p. 27. Those who came to Travis Co. in 1830 were Reuben Hornsby, Martin Wells, Jesse Tannehill and the Wilbargers.....
There were no regular stage coach runs until 1845.

Chapter XII. (1846) People living in Travis Co. in 1846 when Texas became a state and who were still living in Travis Co. in 1900 were: .... R. A. Boyce, Mrs. Aaron Burleson at Webbervill, Crawford Edmiston at Webberville, A. H. Cook (the architect) in Austin .....

Chapter XIV (1849) In September, a jury appointed to view a road from Austin to Manor's at Gilleland Creek ..... J. Manor

The only item on Webberville at the Barker History Center at UT was an article in the Austin American Statesman of 19 Aug 1936. Since some of it refers to other small towns in Travis Co., I will excerpt only that which refers to Webberville.

The article is titled "Band of Women Once Fought off Raid by Indians, WebbervilleFirst Among Central Texas Villages" "Once the very heart of the Indian territory, the capital city of the largest and most historical state in the union folds its wings over the tales of Indian massacres and negro slavery, guarding them close, treasuring the tales of sacrifice and courage, and the ever onward push of the villages which bear the names of the great pioneers. The oldest of these is Webberville, once known as 'Webber's Praire.' In 1827, a headright covering the present site was granted to John F. Webber by the commissioner of Coahuila and Texas. He did not settle there however until 1830. At that time, he was the first settler in this part of the country, then a wilderness filled with buffalo and Indians. His home was built like a fort with a surrounding courtyard as double protrection against the Indians. Other settlers soon collected around Webber bringing with them their slaves. Among the first of these to locate were the Dutys, five brothers in all: Joseph William, Matthew, George and Richard. Two of these, Joseph and George (were in) Austin's original 300. In 1834, Reuben Hornsby and his family which included his wife, Aunt Sallie, six sons, one daughter, and his brother Smith Hornsby, who was accidentally killed by a member of his own party in an Indian fight, settled at Hornsby's Bend. The place Hornsby selected for his fort-home was located about 10 miles below Austin in the midst of the Indian country. This was the first real settlement ever made above Bastrop..... In 1832, J. B. (should read James) Manor left Webberville and established a little settlement under his own name. By 1850 there were some 10 or 12 families in a radius of six miles of Manor. These settlers were constantly fighting Indians until 1852..... (the balance of the article talks of Manor and Littig)

Also at the Barker History Center at UT, I found A History of Central Texas, published by Mary Starr Barkley in 1970. It produced nothing new except this item on p. 87: "Not many people were as brave as James Gilleland who settled on Gilleland Creek 1832. He organized the Methodist Church for Travis and Bastrop Cos. in 1835." Gilleland Creek runs through the Webber's Prarie area.

In the very first volume of the Southwestern Historical Quarterly, published 1897-1898 was a list of 'The Old Three Hundred' settlers of Stephen F. Austin. This list includes: George Duty, Joseph Duty, Daniel Gilleland, James Scott and Elizabeth Tumlinson and James Tumlinson who can be identified with Webberville and early Travis County.

In a narrative history on James Euwin Edmiston which I found in the Austin History Center, I found an interesting incident which I had not seen elsewhere, and I will quote it: "On New Years day 1843, Joseph Manor, James Edmiston, Thomas A. Moore (an uncle of James Edmiston) and a Mr. Johnson, were returning to their homes from a trip to Austin when they came upon a band of Indians (40), driving young Coleman along, bleeding from a lance wound and almost naked. They determined to stampede the Indians if they could and rescue Coleman. They started shooting and putting forth what later became the 'Rebel Yell'. Coleman was released and ran to Austin and gave the alarm. Some of the citizens soon caught up with the heroes, and fought a battle with the Indians, killing three and capturing their accounterments. It was learned that the Indians had killed Bell, who was with Coleman, captured one child of Nolan Luckett and killed another." (quotes from J. Jenkins' Recollection at Random, pp. 166, 167.)

The book Texas Under Arms, published 1969 by Gerald S. Pierce mentions four "forts" in the vicinity of the town of Webberville:

Duty's Fort was the fortified house of the Duty brothers, George and Joseph in "Austin's Little Colony" on the upper Colorado. This fortification was built before the Texas Revolution, abandoned during that conflict, re-occupied and maintained as a fort until sometime during the 1840's. Duty's Fort was in that section which became Travis Co. in 1840, just above the Bastrop Co. line on the north side of the Colorado, about two miles southeast of Webberville.

Hamilton's Fort is said to have been founded by the four Hamilton brothers, Alex, William, James and John, after 1835. Documentary evidence of the existence of such fortifications (Noah Smithwick does not mention it, and neither does John H. Jenkins·) has not been found, but family tradition holds that the Hamiltons lived in a fort. The Hamilton homestead was on the north side of the Colorado River on land that was originally a part of the Duty grant, just to the east of the line dividing Travis and Bastrop counties.

Webber's Fort was one of the numerous private forts in "Austin's Little Colony" along the Colorado. It was the fortified house of John F. Webber, built in the early 1830's and in use until prejudice against his colored wife forced Webber to move out of the settlement sometime during the 1840's. (Note: this should read 1851.) Webber's Fort was on Webber's Prarie, in what became eastern Travis Co., to the north of the Colorado River. The village of Webberville, fifteen miles below Austin, grew up nearby.

Fort Wells was the fortified house of Martin Wells, built during the early 1830's in "Austin's Little Colony" on the Colorado River. It was the simplest of fortifications, consisting only of three cabins built close together and lacking stockade or blockhouse. Lt. Moses Wells commanded a detachment of volunteer rangers at Fort Wells in April and May 1840. It was in the western part of Bastrop Co. almost at the Travis Co. line, on The north side of the Colorado River and approximately three miles southeast of Webberville.

The book Bastrop County Before Statehood, pub. 1986 by Kenneth Kesselus has some items about people who later were in Travis Co. and about incidents that occurred in what became part of Travis County when it was formed in 1840. Actually when Travis Co. was formed from Bastrop Co. it contained about 400,000 sq. miles and now has only 1015 sq. miles within its borders.

Austin's Little Colony was authorized in 1827 and the town of Bastrop was founded in 1832, but it was 1834 before one could buy and sell lots in the town tract. According to Frank Brown, Jesse Tannehill built the first house in town, although Martin Wells was the first settler to live there. Wells later moved up to his headright which adjoined the Osborn and Duty Surveys on the Travis-Bastrop Co. line. On p. 73 of the above cited book, it says that those who lived at least temporarily in Bastrop before 1834 were (among others) Reuben Hornsby, the Duty brothers (Matthew, Joseph, George and Richard), and R. M. Coleman.

On pp. 92-96, Indian depredations are discussed. The first and best known is that of Josiah Wilbarger. It was first reported in a Houston newspaper in 1840, just seven years after it occurred in August of 1833 and must be considered the most likely to be accurate. J.W. Wilbarger's book says the five people involved were William Strother, Thomas Christian, James Standifer and ----- Haynie. Jenkins says Strother and Christian were the two killed and everyone agrees on this being true. The greatest discrepancy in the various accounts involves the dreams. Only two of the early accounts mentioned the dreams, the first being 40 years after the scalping. The study in this book raises serious questions about the truth of the dreams, but concludes that Wilbarger's survival was in itself a miracle. The scalping of Claiborn Osborn is also mentioned.

Early religious life is discussed on pp. 98-100. In 1834 a Mexican law granted toleration of Christian expression other than Roman Catholic. Immediately after this, both Baptists and Methodists began work on starting a church and the first Baptist church was organized in Bastrop Co. on 29 March 1834. The Rev. James Gilleland held the first Methodist service in an unfinished store in the spring of 1835, and Mrs. Thomas Christian was one of the charter members.

The struggle to settle on a new site for the capital of Texas took place in 1839. A group of early settlers in the Bastrop area subscribed a large quantity of land (10,000 ac.) on the condition that Bastrop was named the site. Included in the list was: Wm. Duty (400 ac. fronting on the Colorado River on Duty's Prarie), Josiah Wilbarger (500 ac. on Sandy Creek 5 mi. from Bastrop), Leman Barker (500 ac. on Sandy Creek) (he had m. the widow Elizabeth Standifer), Joseph Duty (300 ac. on the San Gabriel), and John Webber (1 quarter league on the San Gabriel). On 13 Apr 1839, Waterloo was chosen as the new capital and renamed Austin.

Certainly one of the most interesting items in this book is Appendix 6, the 1838 tax list of Bastrop Co. On it are the following people who later ended up living in Travis Co. or owned land in Travis Co. after it was formed in 1840:

William Barton (for whom Barton Springs was named)
Lemon Barker (who m. the widow Elizabeth Standifer)
Joseph Burleson (father of Aaron Burleson who lived in Travis Co. later)
William Duty (one of the Duty brothers)
James Gilleland (for whom Gilleladn Creek was named and whose widow Diana lived in Travis Co.)
Jackson S. T. Haynie (believe this to be S.A.J. Haynes living in Travis Co. 1850)
Alexander Hamilton (lived later in Travis Co.)
John Hamilton (later lived in Travis Co. and brother of Alexander, William and James)
Thomas A. Moore (brother of Nancy Moore Edmiston Robinson Strawn)
Nathaniel Moore (father of Nancy Moore)
John B. Robinson (husband (2) of Nancy Moore)
James Standifer (owned land on the Bastrop-Travis Co. line)
Noah Smithwick (author of Evolution of a State and early settler of Webberville area)
John F. Webber (settled at the site of Webberville)
Josiah Wilbarger (of scalping fame)

ON COMANCHE TRAIL—Mrs. Lee Manor sits on stoop of 111-year-old hewn pine cabin and looks down Old Stagecoach Road (FM 969) where wagons once rumbled. living here on the edge of Webberville since 1919, she recalls a watermill, ferry boat, furniture factory and saloon which are no longer there. Webberville was once in competition with Waterloo (now Austin) as a site for the state capital. The town of Manor was named after Mrs. Manor's father-in-law's brother, James. The father-in-law, Joseph John, used the old flintlock rifle for hunting.

The state legislative council committee will draw up an agenda this week, and among items to consider will be a request by the Travis County Historical Survey Committee to restore the old Coleman Fort.

Mrs. Jessie McIlroy Smith, TCHS committee chairman, said the council committee, chaired by Glen Biggs, was set up by the legislature to study Texas forts and missions. Richard West is committee member in charge of historical research. House speaker Ben Barnes named the committee.

Another related request by TCHS—to designate FM 969 a "historical trail"—has been channeled to the State Parks and Wildlife Department, which will have a board meeting around the first of Septmeber.

The fort and the trail were important in the history of the development of Austin and Travis County, and the focus on getting the fort restored and the road designated are part of the concentrated activity of the TCHS during History Appreciation Month, July 23-Aug. 24.

Mrs. Smith also said Barnes had made a request to Lt. Gov. Preston Smith to "get a study started to tie in with the state's tourist development."

One of the functions of TCHS is to promote tourism by placing markers at important historical points in the county. Similar historical committees are set up in every county in the state, appointed by their respective county judges.

The road which is now FM 969 runs eastward from Austin through Webberville, in the approximate location where a Comanche Trail ran "from time immemorial" from presentday Nacogdoches to the Rio Grande.

In the days of the Spanish Conquest, and later during Anglo pioneer settlement of Texas, the trail was used as a wagon and stagecoach road. In fact, it is referred to variously as "the Old Indian Trail," the "Path of the Pioneers," and the "Old Stagecoach Road." It is also called the Webberville Road.

Ft. Coleman (also known as Ft. Colorado) was located on the trail about "two miles above Hornsby Bend, at the northwest corner of Jesse Tannehill's League," according to one historical source. It was not far from Walnut, or Coleman, creek.

Today, the knoll on which the fort stood, overlooking woods, grasslands and present-day Austin, is empty. Along one slope is a new housing development. At the foot of what is named Old Fort Hill Drive is a stone marker reminding the traveler passing the spot as he drives down FM 969 that Ft. Coleman once stood nearby to protect early settlers from the Comanche, Kiowa and Apache warriors who made fleeting raids with knife and tomahawk.

Actually, Ft. Coleman was built in the summer of 1836, after Texas had declared its independence that same year (in March), and very shortly after some of the major battles of the Texas-Mexico conflict (Alamo, Goliad, San Jacinto).

It was in November, 1835, a month after the battle at Gonzales, that the provisional Texas General Council, under provisional Gov. Henry Smith (ancestor of Mrs. Jessie Smith), established three companies of rangers with 25 men to a company.

Heading the group was Cap. John J. Tumlinson. Their mission: to guard the Brazos, Colorado and Trinity rivers as more and more settlers came into Texas from the east, pushing the Comanches ever westward.

At that time Austin was a community known as Waterloo. It was not until 1839 that the Texas Capital Commission designated the town as capital of the new republic and named it after Stephen F. Austin.

The fort built on the Comanche Trail near Waterloo was named after Ranger Capt. Robert M. Coleman, a man from Kentucky who was marked for tragedy. He drowned in the Brazos River in 1837, and his wife and children were victims of a Comanche raid in 1839.

Coleman was the first commander of the fort. He was succeeded by Capt. Michael Andrews and Capt. William M. Eastland.

During the year 1836, Capt. Tumlinson and a company of 60 mounted men ranged in patrol along the Colorado, from Horsby Bend to Brushy Creek, east of Waterloo.

A community grew up around the fort, and it became known as Fort Prairie because it was located on a prairie, and as John's Town, because a number of men who lived there had that first name.

The rangers disbanded and abandoned the fort in 1838.

At its peak, 112 men were stationed there. It was one in a chain of forts which extended from the Rio Grande to the Red River across the breadth of the state.

The forts did more than protect pioneers from Indians and Mexicans. They were instrumental in settling Texas, since three leagues of land were surveyed around each fort, in lots of 160 acres each, with two leagues reserved for the government and the third being "distributed among such able-bodied citizens as would settle upon and cultivate them (the acres) for two years."

The troops were also to cultivate for their own subsistence "a part of the 320 acres reserved to the government."

One of the men who "belonged to a ranging company at Fort Prairie" was Noah Smithwick, author of "Path of the Pioneers." In 1850 he went to Burnet County, and in 1861 he moved to California, where he died in Santa Ana at the ripe age of 91 in 1899.

One of Travis County's early colonists and farmers during the period of the fort was Jesse C. Tannehill, whose great-great granddaughter, Mrs. Anne Thiele Holder of Austin, has recently written a book about him. The Tannehills used many of the logs from the old fort to consturct their corrals and outbuildings.

Notes concerning Webberville, Travis Co., TX related to Mrs. Raymond Russell, Sr. by Mrs. Hugh E. Lee Manor (who is pictured in the article on Coleman Fort on the previous two pages). This set of notes is in the Austin History Center of the Austin Public Library in the Manor file. (Note by B.McL: Ella Cornelis Carnes married Hugh Everett Lee Manor - Manor aabl.)

"Joseph J. Manor lived on Manor Hill, Webberville, Texas. He owned and operated a twelve wagon freight train, each with four or six oxen. The lead oxen had on bells. One of these bells will be given to one of the Texas Historical organizations, perhaps to the Daughters of the Republic of Texas. Many years ago, Webberville had a hotel, a furniture factory, a saloon, a broom factory, a water mill, two boarding schools, one was a girls boarding school, (and the other) a Mormon School. Two ferry boats crossed the Colorado River there. Edward Fuller (a colored man) still living (1964) ran and owned the boat - the first one. A few years ago, Mrs. Lee Manor who narrated this, still lives in the precious old home built in 1855, said there was a lovely orchard of, fruit such as pears, peaches, plums, figs, dewberries, etcetera growing in the yard. Many years ago other families lived in this old home. Dr. Fowler, then Mr. Hunter and his daughter Mrs. Littlepage when the disastrous flood occured about in 1869 or 70. In fact there were three very bad floods. This six room house years ago had a long porch across the entire length of house but with the ravages of time, etc. the old porch was removed. This particular location was called Webbers Prarie."

The parents of Ella Carnes Manor were: Ella Emma Crowder, b. 1 Jan 1865, d. 24 Oct 1904, m. 18 Dec 1882, William Miner Carnes, b. 12 Jan 1844, d. 13 Nov 1893. W. M. Carnes was a pvt. in Co. C, TN Regiment, CSA and was in the battle of Shiloh. Was badly wounded in the legs and captured in Perryville, 8 Oct 1862. Was later exchanged in Vicksburg, MS and detailed to work in a hospital. Surrendered in North Carolina. The father of Wm. M. Carnes was Robert W. S. Carnes, b. 4 Jun 1820, d. 20 Oct 1859, m. 17 Nov 1842 Prudence Elizabeth Steel, b. 4 Mar 1826, d. 1904, i. Independence, TX. William Henry Crowder who died in 1873 in Texas at age 68 or 69 was the father of Ella Emma Crowder.

There are also four pages of notes on the "Old J. J. Manor Cy." copied 10 Mar 1964 in the Austin History Center. As part of these notes, are some more notes from Mrs. Lee Manor. William Henry Crowder m. Nora Ann Peaches from Tennessee. They had eight children. He m. (2) Pamela Ann Barfield and had four more. The cemetery records have been integrated with those copied by me and my sister, Mary Standifer. There is one more interesting note on Joseph John Manor. "Sam Houston and Joseph John Manor were cabinet makers. Joseph J. Manor received instruction under Sam Houston." I take it that neither did it for a living.

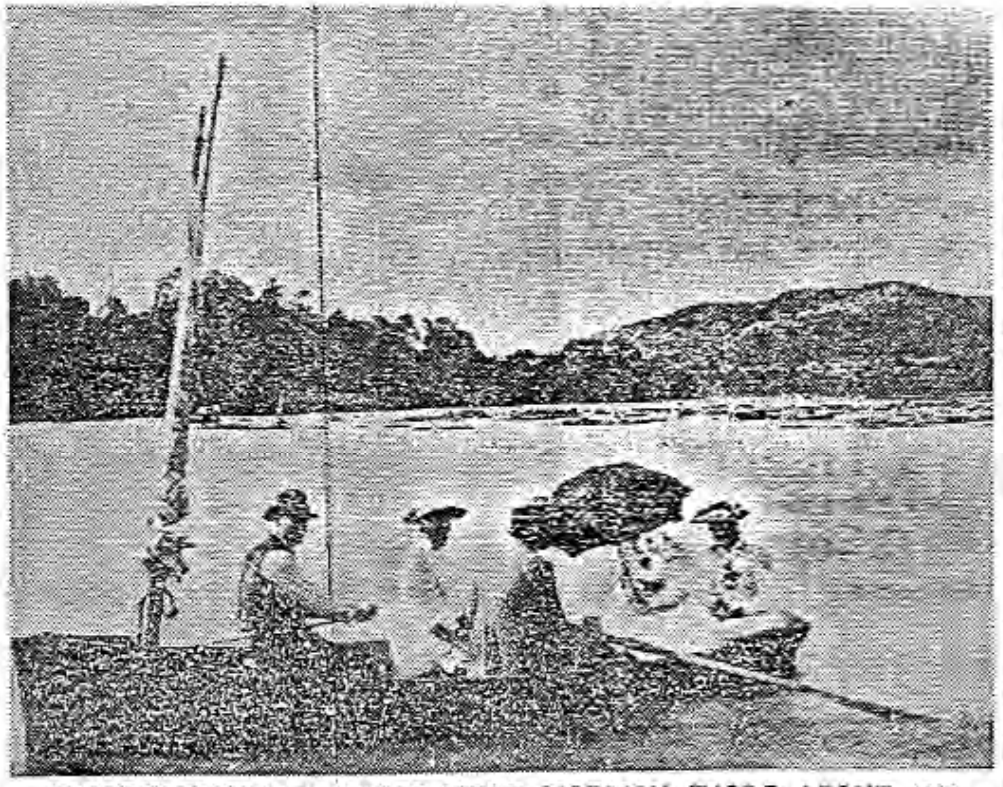
Feet shuffled on the cabin floor, throats cleared, and the Texas settlers looked questioningly at each other. A visiting preacher was a break from the usual routine in the churchless town of Webberville, but this visitor was a religious novelty in their world.

The man who faced them across the cabin's packed dirt floor was accompanied by rumor, gossip, and a certain amount of wariness. A Mormon was enough of an oddity in Texas, much less a man like Lyman Wight.

As Wight surveyed the cabin, he felt no more assured than the settlers. Members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints had come to Texas to escape persecution and the uncertainty that had followed them since the assassination of their founder, Joseph Smith. Too often their stay was cut short by violence, and Webberville's saloons and other profitable lines of business were little cause for reassurance.

A fair sized settlement, 15 miles east of what would one day be the site of the state capital, Webberville had seen its share of fighting since Stephen F. Austin's pioneers had arrived in 1827. The settlers were a hardy people, accustomed to danger, but unaccustomed to the ways of the Mormons. Wight could imagine what they were saying: That he had three wives — a harem — that he and all his people were wild and lawless. But as Wight cleared his throat and started talking, his one certainty was that the determination of the Saints was equal to that of the Texans.

The odyssey of Wight and his followers had begun in Nauvoo, Ill. years before when the Saints had decided to use Texas lumber to build a temple. Wight had led a party of scouts to Texas. In time, however, lumber gave way to land as the Republic of Texas intrigued them as a site for colonization.



FAMILY ENJOYS BOATING NEAR MORMON FALLS ABOUT 1890

rea received name from encampment of Mormons that once lived near the

The Mormons began negotiations with the Texas Republic, hoping to acquire land for a colony to be the forerunner of their own country. For a while the Texans seemed willing to give them an area claimed by Mexico, but the dream remained only a dream as the negotiations slowed and stopped.

Yet to Wight the failure was only a challenge, a call to build a new Zion in the land the Mormons had hop to own. Wight had decided to come to Texas.

The Mormons' search had led them to this Central Texas town and this cabin where Wight must preach on this still June day in 1839. Wight chose his words carefully, making the sermon into a kind of general religious declaration, being careful to leave out anything he thought the people would not understand or tolerate.

The faces listened, at first a little dubious and then almost bored. The bodies sagged and the buzz of insects filtered into the pauses in the purposeful speech of the brown-faced bearded man.

Wight ended and then withdrew, hat in hand and face carefully calm, to make his way through the clusters of cabins toward the square. Two of the men were waiting with Wight's horse near the sharp dip of the bank that led to the ferry. Reins in hand, Wight mounted and the trio rode just east of town to where their tents were pitched below the ridge of hills that overlooked Webberville.

In the midst of the scattered tents and wagons, a small group was discussing a possible site for a grist mill. The mill was their first consideration, but they were a little uneasy about stories of the river's rapid risings which might sweep both mill and stones down the Colorado. The length of their stay would be determined partially, however, by Webberville's reaction to the new arrivals.

On their part, the settlers were a little dubious, but in the end adopted an attitude of wait and see — wait and see if Wight really had a harem, if the people were lawless. At the Mormons' camp the same decision had been reached — wait. If the river rose, if the settlers were unfriendly, if they couldn't build their mill, then they would move.

Both sides watched each other during the dry summer months that followed. The town was alive with talk of becoming the capital of Texas. Webberville was being considered by officials as a possible site, but the need for a bridge over the river made them hesitant. Between the sudden floods and the lack of a rock bed for the bridge, the plan seemed doomed.

With the fall rains came a graphic illustration of their fears, for even in Texas the hot months had to end sometime. Rain ran down the gravel hills to the soft farmland below, down the gushing creeks to the river. The quiet Colorado was suddenly twice as wide and foaming. The grey water swept toward the Gulf, bearing with it Webberville's chance for being the capital. Austin, although smaller was selected as the capital site for there a rock bed and higher ground assured that both government and politicians would not be swept away.

The foaming water also ended the Mormon's stay. Scouts were sent to look for a new location and Wight and his followers moved on to Austin, staying long enough to help build the town's first jail. The Mormons continued their sojourn through Central Texas for the next 20 years.

The Austin Story

Curt Bishop

Webberville can't be called a ghost town. Some dozen families live there; and there is a weatherbeaten school, a church and a frame building where the masonic lodge meets.

It is out Farm Road 793 if you wish to see for yourself, past the scattering of residences which used to be Hornsby's Bend — or maybe still is. You won't see much to confirm the early story of Webber's Prairie, formally established in 1839 but actually a settlement before then. John Webber built a fort at this bend of the Colorado, and sometime in the 1840's a ferry began service across the river.

This was the first ferry upstream from Bastrop, and maybe the first trading post. Some say an earlier settler did business with the Comanches at the mouth of Onion Creek, but the writer doesn't know enough about that to count.

The old Webberville ferry probably was at the site of the present Travis County park. County officials aren't sure how the stretch of grassy bank was acquired. The county owns another park near the Steiner Ranch, but Sheriff T. O. Lang discounts his responsibilities as a park commissioner.

"Some folks camp out at the Webberville park," states the sheriff, "but seldom cause trouble. Every now and then we get complaints about shooting and have to take action. But mostly they just fish — and they are welcome to do that."

Time has stood still along Farm Roads 973 and 969. The land is rich; cotton grows shoulder high in some seasons. Water can be hit at 15 feet and grains grow well, too. But the countryside hasn't changed in almost a hundred years—since the Colonel John Banks plantation enveloped the ruins of Webber's Fort and just upstream the Dunlap and Hunter families started the settlement of Hunter's Bend.

Log cribs are plentiful and a few split rail fences are still standing and only the automobiles, television antennas and idle farm machinery confirm the Twentieth Century.

Otherwise this is the old South, buildings badly in need of paint, sheds warped by rains and winds, cabins patched together with all forms of siding and roofing.

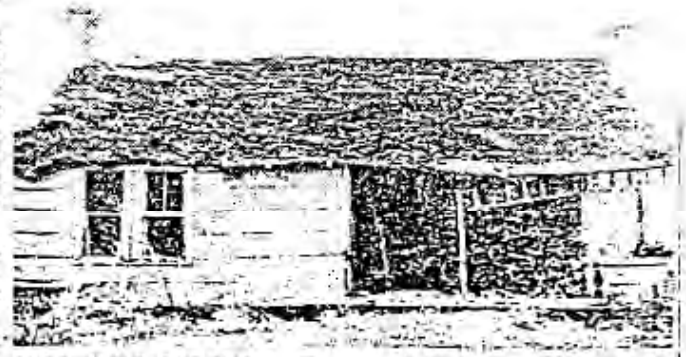
John Webber was a pioneer, not a town builder. Colonel Banks laid out the official town site in 1851, buying portions of two land grants dating back to 1832. Webberville's early bustle was due to river traffic. The landing served both Hudson's Bend and Hornsby's Bend. The "Davey Crockett" and "Kate Ward" stopped here to take on cotton bales. The latter was built especially for the Colorado River, drawing little water but packing a heavy load.

A 'raft' at the mouth of the Colorado kept steamboat traffic to a minimum. There was simply no clearing away the congestion.

The railroads passed by Webberville, dooming it to decline. The population fell off to 50 persons. A post office still functions—a service the Hunter's Bend people could never get. They sent to Austin for their mail until one of the Dunlaps "gained portfolio" as a rural mail-carrier. He was never paid, however, for making his rounds.

The wild flowers bloom a week or so earlier than in other parts of the county. verbenas were thick and bright a few days ago.

Just across the river from all this sprawls Del Valle and Bergstrom Air Force Base. In three short miles you leave one country for another. Maybe that is good, maybe not. Anyhow, it is pleasant to spend a little while in a river bottom touched so lightly by passing years.



LAND TIME FORGOT — The Webberville area of Travis County was the first settled, but is a far cry today from the other nearby scenes. The abandoned houses above are typical of the town once known as Webber's Prairie.

Social life in early Webberville was typical of most small towns in the frontier. Weddings were the most common social events and included feasting and dancing. Church suppers were well attended, and these events were opportunities for neighbors to visit and share the news.

In 1849, the citizens of Webberville decided to establish a club for horse racing, one of the most popular sports of the times. The Webber's Prairie Jockey Club published its rules and regulations in a twelve page pamphlet. Cross country race courses were laid out in various lengths from two to five miles. Rules for betting were established and the club was active until the Civil War.

Side wheeler - 'Kate Ward'

There was a ferry landing on the Colorado where the old county park now exists. Travelers to and from San Antonio used the shallow ford for crossing the river. In 1846 the first river steamboat landed at the ferry crossing. The craft was the Kate Ward from La Grange. She was a side wheel steamer, 115 feet long, 24 feet in the beam and had two 70 horsepower engines. When empty she drew only 18 inches of water. The Kate Ward traveled the Colorado until the Civil War when she was pressed into military service.

Webberville was a town of some importance on the frontier before the Civil War, having two or three churches, three dry goods stores, an academy and one of the best hotels in the country, kept by Col. John Banks. The Wheat Mercantile Store had as extensive and beautiful stock of goods as had been opened anywhere in the interior.

Alas, the good days were about to end, for hard times were coming for the community.

The "History" above was copied from the back page of the present cafe in Webberville by Mary Grace Banks. In her letter to me, she commented that she had never heard of the hotel, but that there was a stage stop there and she had been in it when she was a child - her best friend lived there. It had two big rooms and a fireplace in each. It was made of twelve inch thick wood walls. The building had been added onto to make it a home. Since most stage stops had some sort of accomodations for people to stay to await their stage, the stage stop must have been the "hotel". Several of the articles about Webberville speak of a hotel operated at first by John Baylor Banks.

Later moved to near Holly Springs, Marshall Co., MS and then to Texas, crossing the Sabine River on Christmas Day 1825. Settled near Matagorda where their son Claiborn was born. Received a headright of 4420 ac. in what is now Travis and Bastrop Co. on 30 Nov 1827. Benjamin and Leah died of yellow fever in 1829. Daughter Louisa was reared by Col. Wm. G. Hill of Galveston.

Vol. III, p. 678. Claiborn Osborn - b. 6 Apr 1826 near Matagorda, the son of Benjamin and Leah Stark Osborn. After his parents death, his brother John Lyle Osborn built a log house on Wilbarger Creek in Bastrop Co. for his orphaned siblings. In 1840, fourteen year old Claiborn accompanied by his brother John L. and others on a buffalo hunt in what is now Williamson Co., near Rice's Crossing on Brushy Creek, were attacked by Indians. Claiborn was wounded and scalped and left for dead. Rescued, he was taken first to the home of W. F. Wells where they applied first aid. He was later taken to the house of Noah Smithwick and then to his sister Louisa Hill Osborn Hamilton at Hamilton Fort. Osborn recovered and m. Jane Leverett; they had ten children. He and his family were strong supporters of the annual camp meeting at the old Colorado Chapel, a few miles south of Webberville on the Colorado River. He died 8 March 1899 and is buried in the Manor Cemetery.

Vol. III, p. 678. John Lyle Osborn - b. 31 Jan 1808 TN, the eldest son of Benjamin and Leah Stark Osborn. In 1832, he built a log house (still standing in 1970) for his orphaned siblings on the Osborn headright on Wilbarger Creek. According to Zuber, John L. belonged to Col. Fannin's command. He was in the advance guard under Capt. Albert Clinton Horton when it was cut off from Fannin's ill-fated army, thus escaping the Goliad massacre. He joined Capt. Moseley Baker's Co. and was detailed with others as a teamster on baggage guard at the battle of San Jacinto. He also served as a volunteer in Capt. James Smith's company of cavalry. His discharge papers are signed by Joseph Washington Eliot Wallace at Matagorda. Slightly crippled at birth, Osborn had married Hannah Hadden who died within two months of their marriage. He never remarried. He made his home with his brother Claiborn at the log cabin on Wilbarger Creek. He died 15 Feb 1889 and is buried in the Manor Cemetery.

Vol. III, p. 678. Thomas Osborn - b. 12 Oct 1812 Giles Co.,TN to Benjamin and Leah Stark Osborn. He came to Texas with the family in 1825. He participated in battles in the Texas Revolution beginning with the battle of Velasco 26 Jun 1832 serving in Capt. Henry Stevenson Brown's co. of eighty men. In Oct 1835 he was at the siege of Bexar and on 28 Oct 1835 was with his brother John L. under Capt. Horton. He m. Mary Augustine McCulloch and they had ten children. He was buried at Red Rock, Bastrop Co. after his death 16 May 1883.

Vol. III,p. 1092. John Ferdinand Webber - b. in Vermont in 1793. Served as a private under Capt. S. Dickinson in the War of 1812. He was in Austin's colony as early as 1826 and received a headright in 1832. Some time earlier he was married to a slave, Silvia Hector. On 11 Jun 1834, John Cryer emancipated Silvia and her three children. The Webbers had at least eight additional children. He was the first settler in Webber's Prarie in Travis Co.. Beginning in the 1840's newcomers from the Deep South resented Webber's racially mixed marriage, and ultimately he moved his family. In 1853, he bought several leagues of land fronting on the Rio Grande downstream from the town of Hidalgo. There he established Webber's Ranch. A Unionist, he fled to Mexico during the Confederate occupation of the Rio Grande Valley. He returned in May 1865 and received a pension from the United States in 1872. He died at his home on 19 July 1882 and is buried in the family cemetery, a short distance from the Donna, TX pump. His widow, "Aunt Puss," died about 1891. The hamlet of Webberville in Travis Co. bears his name.

Webberville once 'Hell's Half Acre'

Webberville was once a thriving community, and its beginning pre-dates the founding of Austin. John F. Webber, a retired physician, built the first cabin between Bastrop and Hornsby Bend sometime in the early 1830s. Soon the area was known as Webber's Prairie and by 1839, the year Austin was founded, other settlers had come, attracted by the rich farm land of the Colorado River bottom.

Among the first settlers were the Mormons. Led by Lyman Wight, the colony remained at Webber's Prairie for about a year and a half. They moved on to settle at the falls on the Colorado River about six miles above Austin near the area where the Tom Miller Dam now stands.

Webber's Prairie became Webberville when the post office was established in 1840. Some folks called it "Hell's Half Acre," for it was a wild and woolly town, often attacked by the Comanches; a place where the six-shooter was the law. Joe Manor and Frank Nash opened the first store, and soon after added a saloon, which did a profitable business.

According to Worth S. Ray in "Austin Colony Pioneers," Webberville "was the embodiment of the 'wild west' town, located on the open prairie and largely free from interference by a local constabulary, and practically run 'wide open' in accordance with the modern idea. People on the frontier, like people everywhere else in the world, demanded a certain amount of social freedom, and thought it was necessary to happiness. Every man stood firmly together for the protection of their homes from marauding Indians or other loose elements, but there were no 'blue laws' in force in the town of Webberville to hamstring the young emigrant who wanted to have a good time. If there was anything doing at all it would be found in Webberville.

This shack was once a gas station in wild and woolly Webberville.

"There was even some talk of running Lyman Wight and his Mormons out of town, but there was always some older heads like poor old 'scalped' Josiah Wilbarger, who held the young hot heads in check and counseled sober thinking....

"There was a little church finally built in the town, and now and then Brother John Haynie, or Uncle Jimmie Gilliland before he was killed by the Indians, would come along and preach to the folks of Webberville..."

When the railroad came to Central Texas in the 1870s, it bypassed Webberville and went by the way of Manor. Gradually folks moved away until, in 1925, the ferry stopped running and only one store remained.

In the August 1984 copy of Texas Highways is an article titled "The Josiah Wilbarger Legend". Josiah Wilbarger and his companions Haynie, Standifer, Strother and Christian were out searching for land suitable for settlement by Stephen F. Austin's colonists. Before lunch they had spotted a lone Indian. It was a hot August day in 1833 and they stopped for lunch in the shade of some post oaks. The calm was shattered by a barrage of Indian gunfire and arrows. They took cover but too late for Strother and Christian who were killed by rifle fire from the Indians. Haynie and Standifer made a dash for their ponies, and mounted their saddled ponies and headed for the nearest cabin - that of Reuben and Sarah Hornsby. Wilbarger had an arrow in each leg and over their shoulders, Haynie and Standifer saw Wilbarger fall and blood gush from his neck. At the corner of 51st Street and Old Manor Road in Austin, an obscure granite monument marks the site of where Wilbarger was scalped. He lost his hair on that day, but not his life. The site is several hundred feet upstream from Pine Springs. Josiah fell unconscious when the Indians ripped the flesh from his skull with their knives. He awoke later in the day and crawled to the creek and cooled himself in the water until he was numb. He decided to try to crawl to the Hornsby cabin which was six miles away but made it only about 600 yards. He leaned againt a tree. When Haynie and Standifer reached the Hornsby cabin they reported his supposed death. A monument marks the cabin's site, adjacent to the Hornsby family cemetery.

The legend says that while Wilbarger waited to be rescued, he saw a vision of his sister Margaret Clifton standing before him. The vision said 'You lie here and rest and help will come to you before another day is over.' Sarah Hornsby also saw an apparition and woke everyone in the house. She was convinced to go back to sleep, but in the morning, at her insistence, a party rode forth to bury the three who fell in the Indian attack. When they reached the site of the attack, they found Josiah alive and took him back to the Hornsby cabin to recover.

Twelve years later, Wilbarger hit his head against the doorway of his gin on a low beam, and he did not survive the accidental blow. He was age 43 when he died in 1845. In 1932, his and his wife's remains were moved to the Texas State Cemetery in Austin. I personally heard my father Banks McLaurin, Sr. tell me this same story. The legend was made into a TV program on Death Valley days, and I remember seeing this.

Note: The above article appears to be based on newspaper articles which appeared in the Austin papers the week after the death of the great baseball player, Rogers Hornsby, on 5 Jan 1963. My parents sent me copies of these articles by J. Frank Dobie who was a very close friend of my parents, and they are duplicated on the following two pages.

(Editor's Note: The entire community of Hornsby Bend near Austin has received nationwide attention in recent days as the home of the great baseball figure, Rogers Hornsby. Final rites for Hornsby will be held Thursday at Hornsby Bend. His ancestors, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Hornsby, are famous in history, too. This story, written by J. Frank Dobie, is about these early settlers.)

By J. FRANK DOBIE

One cold night soon after he came to Texas, Bigfoot Wallace was sitting in the warm cabin of a settler down the Colorado River when a stranger wearing a strange-looking fur cap entered, stood bent over the fire a few minutes, and then removed his headgear. At sight of the raw-looking, hairless scalp thus exposed, Bigfoot Wallace broke the social code against asking questions.

"My friend," he ventured, "excuse me, but what is the matter with your head?"

"I have been scalped by the Indians," the stranger replied.

He was Josiah Wilbarger. The story of his scalping and of the dream that saved his life has been told in homes of old-time Texans and kept also in print for more than 100 years. It is one of the best-known historical legends of the land.

Located on River

In 1830, Josiah Wilbarger, lately of Missouri, located on a headright survey along the Colorado River about 10 miles above the crossing of the Camino Real—the royal road, as the Spaniards called it — between San Antonio and Nacogdoches. His nearest neighbor was 30 miles or so down river. Two years later his friend Reuben Hornsby built, with slave help, a double-log cabin up the river, nine miles below the present city of Austin, and moved into it with his wife Sarah and eight children. Although separated by several miles, the families were close neighbors. The names of Wilbarger's Creek and Hornsby's Bend fix permanently the locations of these two outposts of colonization.

Early in August, 1833, Wilbarger went up to Hornsby's Bend to join a party of men scouting for headrights. The Hornsby home had already become a kind of land's end headquarters. After spending the night, Wilbarger in company with four men named Christian, Haynie, Stanifer, and Strother set out to explore to the northwest. On Walnut Creek, they sighted a lone Indian, who ran and escaped into the cedar hills.

After the chase the party turned homeward. Near Pecan Spring, as the place was later named, they halted to noon. Wilbarger, Christian and Strother unsaddled their horses and hobbled them to graze, the other two men staked theirs with the saddles on, merely removing the bridles. While the men were eating, they were without warning fired on by Indians, who had skulked up in the brush and timber. Some of the Indians had only bows and arrows.

The white men got behind trees, which were small, and returned the fire, but soon Strother received a mortal wound and a ball broke Christian's thigh. With an arrow through the calf of a leg and a flesh wound in a hip, Wilbarger dragged Christian behind a tree. About this time an arrow went into his other leg. Haynie and Standifer now made for their saddled horses. As they mounted, Wilbarger started running toward them, calling upon them to wait. They saw him pitch headlong to the ground. Then they saw "50 Indians" rushing for his scalp. They got away and reached Hornsby's house in safety.

Help Summoned

There they told how they had seen the savages scalping their dead comrades and heard them yelling the blood yells. For the present, all the men agreed, the dead would have to care for the dead. The Indians were in such force and had met with such success that they might well be expected to attack the Hornsby outpost. A rider was sent below, to carry the tidings to the Wilbarger home and to summon help.

At last the house quieted down, and Sarah Hornsby fell asleep. About midnight she jumped awake from a vision as sharply defined as the peaks of clouds under sheet lightning. She shook her husband, speaking so loud that men in the other room of the house heard.

"Wilbarger is not dead," she cried. "I saw him in a dream. He sits under a large post oak tree, naked, covered with blood from wounds, scalped. But he is not dead. I saw him plainly."

Reuben Hornsby soothed his wife. He tried to pacify her by going over the details related by the two survivors. He laid the dream to overwrought nerves. She quieted down and went back to sleep.

But about three o'clock she sprang from bed, more excited and intense this time than before. "I saw him again," she cried. Her husband could not pacify her now. She threw a dress on, lit a candle, aroused all the men.

"As sure as there is a God," she repeated, "Josiah Wilbarger is alive. He is alive out there all alone under a large post oak tree. His only covering is the blood from his own wounds. He is scalped, but he lives, suffering tortures, hoping and waiting for help."

"But," started to explain once more one of the men who had left Wilbarger.

"But me no buts," Sarah Hornsby went on with rising voice. "I saw him as plainly as I now see you safe and sound in front of me. If you are not cowards, go at once or he will die."

"I'll say it again as I have already said it many times," the escaped man now got his word in. "I saw Wilbarger shot down. I saw at least 50 Indians around his body. They were even then lifting his scalp. They never leave a victim breathing."

"I don't care what you saw," Sarah Hornsby retorted. "Maybe you were too busy running to see anything straight. Anyhow, I have had the last look. I know that Wilbarger is alive. Go. Go at once."

There was no arguing, but Reuben Hornsby now pointed out that if he and the other men left before the expected recruits arrived from below, his wife and children would be in grave danger.

"Never mind me," his wife flared. "I and my children can take to the dogwood thicket and lie hid. Go, I tell you, to poor Wilbarger."

Black Hair, Eyes

She was a little black-haired, black-eyed woman of pure Scotch blood off a plantation of traditional refinement in Mississippi. She sang Highland ballads, read the Bible to her children, and taught them to read the box of books she had hauled in an ox wagon all the way to Texas.

One time when all the men were gone from her home in Hornsby's Bend she dressed in man's clothes and showed herself armed with a rifle in order to scare off lurking Indians. Another time while her husband was away she sent two of her boys at milking time to bring in the cows from the wild rye that stretched out from the house like a field of wheat. From the window—for there was never a minute of easiness at this habitation in the wilderness—she, gun in hand, watched them. Then, powerless to give aid, she saw a band of Indians raise up with a yell behind the boys, but the boys got into the house unharmed.

Another time she saw savages kill two young men hoeing in the field; then after dark she and her young sons buried them. In time she buried one of her own sons and another youth who were fishing in the river when Indians killed them.

the great baseball star, Rogers Hornsby, will be brought home to Hornsby Bend for burial Thursday. He brought fame to his home community, but it was already legendary, made so by his ancestors, Reuben and Sarah Hornsby. This story, written by J. Frank Dobie, is part of the Hornsby legend.)

By J. FRANK DOBIE

As was told Wednesday, in 1813 Reuben Hornsby (of Hornsby's Bend below Austin) was the uppermost settler on the Colorado River. Miles below him lived Josiah Wilbarger. One morning Wilbarger and four other men set out from Hornsby's to scout for land. That evening two of the men returned, reporting that Indians had surprised them while eating lunch near Walnut Spring to the northwest and had killed and scalped the other three, Wilbarger among them. A rider was sent at once down the Colorado to summon aid.

About midnight Sarah Hornsby, a remarkably plucky and resolute woman, roused her husband, saying, "Wilbarger is not dead. I saw him in a dream. He sits under a large oak tree, naked, scalped and covered with blood."

Hornsby pacified his wife and she went back to sleep. About three o'clock the same dream awoke her. She roused the men and urged them to go for Wilbarger.

Against such resoluteness Reuben Hornsby and the other men could not now stand. Still, they refused to leave until daylight, by which time the recruits from below were expected. Sarah Hornsby made coffee, cooked breakfast. Daylight comes early in August. With it came the expected reinforcements. Then, the searching party prepared to ride.

Three Sheets

"Take these three sheets," Sarah Hornsby called. "Two to bury Chistian and Strother in. One to wrap around Wilbarger. You will have to bring him home on a litter. He cannot ride a horse."

This part of her prophesy alone proved erroneous. The men went to the campsite where the Indians had attacked the day before. They shrouded the bodies of Christian and Strother, from whom all clothing had been stripped. After much search, late in the afternoon, they sighted a red-hued figure under a big post oak tree. An advance rider, mistaking him for an Indian, called out, "Here they are, boys!"

At this the figure rose up, saying, "Don't shoot. It is Wilbarger."

His body was caked with blood. The only particle of his clothing that had been left by the Indians was a sock. This he had torn from his foot, swollen from the leg wound, and placed on his naked skull.

[illegible] he was placed in Hornsby's saddle, the light-weighted Hornsby riding behind and holding the wounded man in his arms. Very slowly the horsemen filed towards the cabin in the river bend, six miles away.

There they found all in readiness for the rescued man: a bed, warm water to cleanse the wounds, poltices of wheat bread—a bread too scarce to eat—and bear's oil to dress the scalpless head. "I knew you would bring him," Sarah Hornsby said.

Wilbarger's own story made Sarah Hornsby's dreams seem even more remarkable. The shot that knocked him to the ground had gone into his neck from the rear and come out at his chin. It only creased—temporarily paralyzed him, he said. He did not feel pain. He could not move a muscle; yet he was conscious. He knew when a savage cut his scalp around with a knife and jerked it off. He did not flinch—because there was no pain to flinch from and he could not flinch. The only sensation he experienced was a sound as of distant thunder. He knew when the Indians were stripping off his clothes. They had cut the throats of the other men. The sight of the bullet hole under his chin perhaps made them think that act unnecessary with him.

Flies Buzzed Him

There was a lapse of time during which Wilbarger knew nothing. The sun was half way down the western sky when he recovered consciousness and felt pain and knew that he was alone and could move. Dried blood was all over him, and he was still bleeding. He felt a thirst, that was agony. He tried to stand up and walk but could not. The directions of the compass were perfectly clear to him. He knew where the camp waterhole was. He dragged himself to it. He drank and lay down in the water. He lay there until he was almost numb with cold. Then he crawled out on dry ground to be warmed by the sloping rays of the August sun. Then he fell into a deep sleep.

Sehn he awoke green blow-flies were buzzing around his head. It does not take the eggs they lay long to hatch into flesh-eating worms. His wounds had ceased to bleed. He was again consumed with thirst. When he had drunk again, sharp hunger came upon him. His wonderful constitution was crying for nourishment to rebuild what his body had lost. He crawled to some bushes and ate a few snails that he found. He drank more water. He felt the maggots in the naked flesh of his head.

About nightfall he determined to crawl to the Hornsby house. But he had gone only about a quarter of a mile before, utterly exhausted, he halted under a large post oak tree. There in semi-consciousness he rested until extreme cold roused him. The only sounds that came to his ears were the pulsing of the crickets, the hoot of an owl, and the long, long wail of a wolf. The dying moon came up.

Then, as he lay under the tree, he saw suddenly, distinctly, without warning, the figure of his sister, Margaret Clifton. He saw her, yet she, he well knew, was living in Missouri, near St. Louis, more than 700 miles away. It was not until many weeks had passed that he learned she had died the day before he was wounded and even at the hour of his vision was spending her first night in the grave.

Standing near him, the sister said, her voice calm and restful, "Brother Josiah, you are too weak to go any farther by yourself. Remain here under this tree and friends will come to take care of you before the setting of another sun."

When she had spoken thus, she began to move away in the direction of Hornsby's house. Such was Wilbarger's state of mind, and so vivid was the visitant's form and so clear were her words that he did not question her reality. As the vision vanished, he raised himself and with an imploring gesture called after her, "Margaret, my sister Margaret, stay with me until they come! Margaret!"

But the air was empty of answering sound and of sisterly form alike.

Recovered

Josiah Wilbarger recovered though the skin never grew entirely over his skull bone. He lived for 11 years leading an active life, until an accidental blow on the exposed skull hastened death. No one who knew him or Mrs. Hornsby ever doubted the veracity of either in their accounts of the dream—or spirit—visitation. Wilbarger told his story long before he heard of his sister Margaret's death. He was very definite in saying that the vision faded from sight while moving in the direction of the Hornsby home. As near as could be figured out, Mrs. Hornsby's first vision of the wounded man occurred shortly after Wilbarger heard his sister's voice.

The other Webberville community citizen who survived being scalped was Claiborn Osborn who is buried in the Manor Cemetery. My father was 11 when Claiborn died and remembered seeing Claiborn and hearing him recite his survivial from a scalp wound. The Indian who scalped Claiborn did not cut through the scalp bone, which enabled Claiborn to survive to the age of 73.

There are several versions of this scalping. J. W. Wilbarger's Indian Depredations in Texas, published in 1888 is one, and Noah Smithwick's The Evolution of a State is another. The Handbook of Texas, Recollections of Early Texas by Jenkins, Border Wars by Shields, The Bastrop Advertiser Homecoming Edition of August 2, 1956, all have differing versions and I also have private versions by J. H. Gillaspy and Effie Lee Fowler Osborn.

John Lyle Osborn, his brother, related to Osborn descendants that the scalping occurred on January 6, 1841 near Rice's Crossing on Brushy Creek in what is now Williamson Co. Besides Claiborn and John Lyle Osborn, there were on the hunting trip: James Hamilton, Alexander Hamilton (two of his brothers in law), and others. They were jumped by Indians and Claiborn's horse fell behind in the rush to get away from them. The others soon noticed his absense and returned to the scene. The Indians were in a hurry to cut off his scalp and only pealed back the skin on his head, and he was bruised in his fall from the horse. He was nursed back to health by his sister, Louisa Hill Osborn Hamilton, ancestor of Banks and Mary McLaurin. Banks McLaurin, Jr. published his book on the Osborne family in September of 1994, and this book has complete details on all of the versions of the scalping as well as the history of the Osborne family from its arrival in Virginia in 1619 to the present day. Claiborn was the ninth generation in America. The first to arrive in Virginia, Thomas Osborne, b. 1584 in England, survived several attacks by Indians and sat in the House of Burgesses of Colonial Virginia. The book is titled Thomas Osborne of Coxendale. "Coxendale" was the name of Thomas Osborne's 1000 ac. plantation on the James River a few miles below present day Richmond, VA.

p. 235. Joseph Manor

"It was in the winter of this year that Joseph Manor killed his Indian. In the latter part of the winter of 1844, Mr. Manor and a Mr. (Frank) Nash formed a partnership in the mercantile business. They had received their first supply of goods at Webberville, where they had established their house, and were engaged one night in marking and invoicing them, when their attention was attracted by the snorting of a mule that Mr. Manor had staked near his room for safe keeping. He stepped out to see three Indians approaching it. As the Indians drew near it the animal snorted loudly, and endeavored to break the rope by which it was staked, whereupon one of the Indians let by and shot it through the body. Mr. Manor slipped back into the house, seized his gun, and said to Mr. Nash: "There are Indians out yonder. They have killed my mule. Take my pistol on the counter and let's go out and fight them." But Mr. Nash did not hear what he said about the pistol, and followed him without any arms. As they turned a corner of the house they saw an Indian standing at the opposite one, and Mr. Manor fired at him, killing him on the spot. When the Indian fell, Mr. Nash drew his knife from his pocket and started to go to him, saying he wanted to scalp him in revenge for their scalping his father, but Mr. Manor held him back, telling him there were other Indians near, and that he might lose his own scalp. At this juncture the other two Indians rushed up, seized their fallen comrade and carried him off."

In the Manor file in the Austin History Center of the Austin Public Library is a small document saying that J. J. Manor was authorized to keep a dry goods and grocery store in Travis County, Texas, dated 29 September 1845 and signed by the county clerk of Travis Co., TX.

Perhaps the best source of information on Webberville was the last one I found. It was in the files of the Barker History Center at the University of Texas. It was an unpublished source - a Master's Thesis prepared in August 1938 by Mrs. Aloise Walker Hardy, titled: A History of Travis Co. Texas 1832-1865. I had the good luck of having Mrs. Hardy as a teacher for Texas History at University Junior High School in 1937, and she lived just across the park in Aldridge Place where I grew up in Austin. I will quote from this thesis:

p. 178. Webberville was a town of some importance before the Civil War. The State Gazette of 4 Jun 1853 reported that Webberville had 2 to 3 church buildings, 3 dry goods stores, 1 academy, one of the best hotels in the county kept by Col. Banks. In 1859, Webberville had 2 churches, 2 schools, a hotel and had a population of about 200.

p. 239. The Webberville area was designated as District 5 in 1852. The tax payers in this district were:

Joseph Duty	J. M. Tyler
John Hamilton	C. C. Carpenter
Jefferson Warren	James Price
Joseph Manor	Susannah Glover
William Wood	Anderson Tyler
Nancy Strawn	A. L. Leedham
Washington Anderson	M. R. Ryan
Samuel Quinn	J. T. McLean
L. U. D. Eazell	James Carter
Wilson McNeal	D. E. Lewis
Nancy Roulls	E. R. Gentry

Emmy Hutte	J. B. Banks
George McCoy	Westley Smith
Bishop Sawyer	David Quinn
Thomas Glasscock	A. W. Miller
George D. Glasscock	M. L. Strayhorn
John Glasscock	J. M. Grisum

This breakdown into Districts in Travis Co. was for school tax reasons.

I found one book which had an item on Webberville in an antique mall in Dallas. The book was titled: Check List of Texas Imprints 1846-1860; 1949; Ernest W. Winkler. It was a listing of all publications found by the author in Texas during the period covered. No. 125 was: Webber's Prarie Jockey Club Rules and Regulations adopted 1 Oct 1849. Thomas A. Moore, Pres., James S. Dodd, V. Pres., S. A. J. Haynie, Sec. 11 pages, pub. Austin.

In the 1850 census of Travis Co., S. A. J. Haynes is family #2, James P. Dodd is family #13, and Thos. J. Moore is family #20, and despite the slight differences in spelling, these are most certainly the three officers of the Webber's Prarie Jockey Club. Thomas A. Moore was a brother of Nancy Moore Edmiston Robinson Strawn. These three were all neighbors of the Manors, Hamiltons, Dutys, Scotts, Strawns, Osborns, etc. They were probably expert riders due to having to protect themselves from the Indians.

The article below was written by Nannie Smith Banks, wife of Hood Hamilton Banks and mother of Mary Grace Banks. Banks McLaurin, Jr. has made two slight changes in dates, from his research into land grants and when John B. Banks came to Texas.

"In (1832), John F. Webber received a half league of land from Mexico in Austin's Little Colony. For safety the colonists clustered around the Fort on the River. They fished and made gardens, had some livestock and traded among themselves. However, like most colonists, they had very little money. Mr. Webber got into financial troubles and mortgaged his half league of land. At the right time (1851), John B. Banks came to the Colony and bought the half league of land from Mr. Webber for $10,000 cash. (John Baylor Banks had come to Washington Co.,TX shortly before 1840.)

Col. Banks put a "new face" on the colony. He had it surveyed, laid off the "Town Square: 260 feet by 260 feet and made the town into blocks and the blocks into lots. The "Square" was between Water St. on the river and Webber St. (now Farm Road 969). Webber had built his own house just east and across the road from the "Square". The two streets were about a mile long. There were shorter streets on the west side and up the river to the creek which was the boundry of the Webber grant. These shorter streets were used by the early settlers but later abandoned and became a part of the pastures nearby and so faded into the past.

The earliest places of business were in Block 1 just north of the "Square" but after the coming of Col. Banks the "Square" became the real center. Soon Webberville was a thriving colony and colonists came from far away to trade, to visit and to get the news. There were several General Stores (that handled everything), a Post Office, Drug Store, Doctor's Office, Blacksmith Shop, Barber Shop, Meat Market, Grist Mill (built by the Mormons), Saddle Shop, Furniture Factory and perhaps there were other businesses.

Webberville was the largest colony west of Bastrop on the "Old San Antonio Trail". Water Street coincides with the "Old San Antonio Trail". At the southwest corner of Block II was the old "Stage Stop" that served passengers from Bastrop to San Antonio before Austin existed.

Col. Banks was responsible for the success of this colony. When he bought the half league, he took the land east of the colony for his own and gave the town to the colonists. He sponsored and financed the building of churches and schools for both white and black and the building of a Masonic Lodge over the white school. He paved the way for the colonists and left them to their own devices but always with a watchful eye over them.

Col. Banks surveyed and fenced his own land and put the whole valley in cultivation. He built for himself a small stone house with a lookout on top. This house was located on a small and almost inaccesible hill. For his family, friends and slaves, he built homes on a larger and higher hill near his own.

(After the Civil War) Col. Banks sold his holdings - 1500 acres to Mr. Aaron Burleson for 1600 bales of cotton - high grade - and properly baled and delivered to him in Galveston.

(Note by Banks McLaurin, Jr.: My research first identifies John Baylor Banks in 1840 when he was county clerk of Jackson Co., TX from March 11 to May 11. He received a land grant in Texas in 1845. He was then 27 years old. He married in Washington Co., TX 22 Jan 1844 to Carolyn C. Browning. He is in Washington Co., TX in the 1850 census with two children and his wife. In late 1850 or early 1851 he moved to Travis Co., TX and bought the land of John F. Webber and opened up a large farm and laid out the town of Webberville. About 1852, his father Thomas Banks, and wife Barbara Bledsoe Banks, moved from Marshall Co., TX and settled at Webberville, along with his brother Gaston Haywood Banks, wife Candis Baucom Banks, and their children. Col. Banks was on the board of Austin Female Academy in 1851. He served in the legislature from Travis Co. in 1853. In 1860, he and his family lived in Travis Co. and lived at Webberville, six houses from his brother Gaston. After the Civil War, the John Baylor Banks family moved to Galveston where he became a very sucessful businessman. He died 28 Jan 1874 in Galveston and his wife Caroline died 25 Jun 1909 in Waxahatchie, TX. Col.Banks' daughter Mary Ann born 1848 in TX, m. 1 Mar 1868 in Travis Co., TX, W. H. Browning. This would indicate Col. Banks was still in Travis Co. in 1868. Col. Banks daughter Carolyn Eloise Banks b. 1860 in Webberville, m. 23 Jan 1882 in Galveston, Samuel Fain Carter. Carter was a very successful businessman in Houston, starting Sunset Lumber Co. with Lynch Davidson and Emporia Lumber Co. with M. T. Jones. He was one of the founders of Lumberman's National Bank. My comments and changes are in parenthesis in the article above. On the next page is a map which my father had on the layout of the town of Webberville. There was no north arrow on this map or scale; from another map which Mary Grace Banks had, both could be determined. I can make out the names Banks McLaurin, Primitive Baptist Church, T. G. Banks, McCaleb, also Minnie M. Manor and Will Smith, so it must be of post 1910 vintage.)

Note: This map had no scale or north arrow. From another map of part of the same area, which Mary Grace Banks had, I was able to come up with both an orientation and a scale of 1" = 100'

DEATSVILLE PRIVATE SCHOOL

As related to Banks McLaurin, Jr. by Banks McLaurin, Sr. 1961

The Paul Deats family had a store. After it closed as a store, it was later converted to a school which lasted for three years from 1898 to 1901. The building is now gone. It was located a block towards Webberville from where Coin McLaurin lives today. (1961)

The families put up $25 each to fix up the store as a school. This was for materials as the men did the work, putting in a stage, desks, windows, etc. Tuition was $2 per pupil per month for each of the nine months the school operated. Of this, $50 was for the teacher per month, and $10 for wood, chalk and other supplies.

The teacher the first year was Sallie Mae McCoslin, Cannot remember the teacher the second year. The third year the teacher was Fannie Taylor. Before 1898, we went to the Webberville school for a seven month term. Before and after the regular term, Hugh McLaurin (father of Banks McLaurin, Sr.) and others would pay the teacher $50 per month and held a private school at Deatsville.

The families involved and their children were:

Hugh McLaurin	2 children	(Banks and Coin)
Mrs. Glasscock	2 children	(she nee Burleson)
Paul Deats	1 child	(Lewis)
Bob Deats	3 children
Rufus Burleson	3 children
Jeff Burleson	4 children	(he a brother of Mrs. Glasscock)
R. R. Smith, Jr.	6 children
Dan Matthews	5 children	(Felix, Hugh & 3 others)

From: The Evolution of a State by Noah Smithwick

"Captain Tumlinson was commissioned to raise a company on the Colorado and early in January 1836 he reported for duty with a company of sixty mounted men, myself included. We were assigned to duty on the headwaters of Brushy Creek, some 30 miles northwest of the site of the present capital, that city not having been even projected then. The appointed rendezvous was Hornsby's station, ten miles below Austin on the Colorado, from which place we were to proceed at once to our post, taking with us such materials as were necessary to aid us in the construction of a block house. (p. 118)

We went on up to our appointed station, where we built the old Tumlinson blockhouse, making it our headquarters till the invasion of Santa Anna necessitated our recall, after which it was burned by the Indians and never rebuilt. And, save this old dismantled hulk, there is not, to my knowledge, one of those old Tumlinson rangers now living. (p. 123)

Somewhere about the first of March we were called in to Bastrop. Santa Anna, with a large force, was marching upon the poorly protected frontier, and all advanced positions were ordered abandoned, and the forces to concentrate at Gonzales, whither every available man was urged to repari forthwith; thus leaving the frontier settlements exposed to both Mexicans and Indians. Families were gathering at Bastrop, preparatory to a general hegira before the ruthless invaders, who were said to be waging a war of extermination, and we were ordered to cover their retreat, and afterwards join General Houston. Turning over the command to Major Williamson, Capt. Tumlinson and his first lieutenant, Jo Rodgers (afterwards killed by Indians) went to remove their families to a place of safety. (pp. 123-124)

When the Texas Army, under General Rusk, moved up from San Jacinto to Victoria in the wake of the retreating Mexicans, the rangers were detailed to guard the baggage. The country being deserted, we helped ourselves to anything in the way of provisions we found lying around loose; but, the Mexican army having marched and countermarched through that section, there was little, except livestock, left to forage on. (p. 142)

The settlers gradually regained confidence and by this time were pretty much all back in their homes. The Indians were committing many outrages, making it again necessary to garrison the frontier. As neither Capt. Tumlinson nor his lieutenants reported for duty, Col. Coleman was instructed to proceed up on Walnut Creek, six miles below Austin, and built the Coleman fort, consisting of a cluster of log cabins enclosed with a heavy stockade. All of the Tumlinson rangers were ordered to report to Coleman, their term of enlistment (one year) not having expired. Bastrop County suffered more from Indians during the year 1836 than for any other year of its history. I could mention numbers of its best men who were killed during that time. The return of the rangers, however, checked hostile incursions for a time, and people began to scatter out from the forts, in which they had been compelled to take refuge, and settle down to the business of preparing for next season's crops; few of them having made anything that year. (p. 153)

It was, I think, late in the summer of 1837, during the temporary truce growing out of my missionary labors, that Capt. Eastland, then in command at Coleman's fort, led an expedition up the Colorado to the mouth of Pecan bayou and out on the latter stream to its source. (p. 200)

So ended the second attempt at treating with the Comanches, and, fearing that there might be need of our services at home, we at once started on our return. When we got back to the Guadalupe the river had falled so as to admit of fording. My gun was in a deep hole, however, and, on my offering a dollar for its recovery, one of the men dived down and brought it up, little worse for the baptism. Without delay or further mishap we reached the fort, where I remained till the rangers were disbanded, some time in 1838.

Looking back through the long vista of sixty years and recalling the hard road we old pioneers had to travel, it seems almost miraculous that any are left to tell the tale. The old Tumlinson rangers were made up of citizens of Bastrop county, among them being Joseph Rodgers, who was first lieutenant; James Esmiston, Jimmie Curtice, Hugh M. Childers, John Williams, Joe Berry, Jim Hamilton, Oliver Buckman, orderly sergent; Calvin Barker, Felix W. Goff, Ganey Croscy, familiarly known as 'Choctaw Tom'; Joe Weeks and many others whose names I do not now recall. To the best of my knowledge they have all passed off the stage."

The Handbook of Texas has this to say on p. 807-808: "John James Tumlinson, a native of TN, immigrated to Texas in Nov. 1821 with his wife and three sons. The General Council elected him captain of a ranger corps in Nov. 1835 and with that group he participated in the siege of Bexar. He was again a captain of a ranger company from 25 Feb 1836 until 16 Aug 1836 participating in the battle of San Jacinto. On 9 Aug 1840, Tumlinson was in command of a group of volunteer rangers who pursued the Camanche Indians after the attack on Linnville and fought them southeast of Victoria." As you see, Smithwick's memory after 60 years was not too bad.

The article quoted below appeared in the Sept. 14th 1861 issue of the Texas State Gazette: "Austin, Septmber 5, 1861. Dr. Worrell: Dear Sir - The following is a list of the citizens of Travis County belonging to Captain Ferrell's company, who left Bastrop on the 31st ult., to join Col. Terry's regiment, for Virginia, which they respectfully request you to publish, Respectfully, W. L. Giles.
Jesse F. Burditt, 2d Lieutenant; F. M. Hill, J. Milam Duty, James H. Gault, W. Hamilton, Lewis L.Giles, Walker Wheeler, John Washington, J. B. Rogers, T. B. Banks, L. B.Giles, Charles Pelham, B. C. Giles, Fenton P. Bott, Jeff. Burleson, Bill Burditt, James C. Pickle, John Henry, John Davidson, James P. McArthur, Samuel Piper, Jesse B. Rowe, J. V. Jones, W. H. Roberts, Aaron Burleson, T. B. Pue, William Davis, Geo. B. Zempleman, M. E. Thomas, William R. Black, V. Catteron, A. T. Logan, Charles H. Stone, James H. Brenham, James R. Rector, Joseph Ford, Walter Caldwell, A. H. Sevelle.

The person who submitted the article was W. L. Giles, and is presumed to be the brother of the Giles men listed below.

The Terry Rangers was organized as the 8th Texas Cavalry beginning 12 Aug 1861, when the recruiters went forth from Houston, TX. The three organizers were: Benjamin Franklin Terry, a sugar planter of Fort Bend Co., Thomas S. Lubbock of Houston, brother of soon-to-be governor Francis R. Lubbock, and John Wharton, a Brzzoria lawyer. All three served in the Texas Secession Convention. Each in turn served as commander of the Rangers and each in turn met his death during the war. The regiment formed up in Houston with from 1200-1600 (accounts vary) and went first to Bowling Green, KY instead of Virginia. From the first and during the entire war, those who served in the Rangers were volunteers; each man furnished his own horse, arms and equipment.

In the first engagement, on 17 Dec 1861, Terry was killed and the group was thereafter known as Terry's Texas Rangers. At the battle of Shiloh on 6-7 Apr 1862, they were a part of the Army of Tennessee and they continued in this capacity until the end of the war. They were at Perryville 8 Oct 1862, Murfreesboro 31 Dec 1862, Chicamauga 19-20 1863 and many other important engagements. Reports vary on the number of engagements they were involved in - 100 being the least and 200 the most.

Of the 2100 who served in the regiment during the war, only 244 were left when the war ended with them in North Carolina under Gen. Joseph E. Johnston. Tom Weston was the final commander of the Rangers. In turn they served under Albert Sydney Johnston, Joe Wheeler, Nathan Bedford Forrest, Longstreet, John Bell Hood and J. E. Johnston. When the war ended, one article says only 90 remained. Some surrendered in North Carolina but some made their way to New Orleans on horseback and turned themselves in to get passage back to Texas. (My great grandfather is one who did this latter. BMcL)

An equestrian statue on the ground of the Texas capital building in Austin commemorates the Rangers. One of the men responsible for this statue and for many notable gifts to the University of Texas was George W. Littlefield who served as a Major in the Rangers during the war. Littlefield Memorial Fountain at the University of Texas is named in his honor and Littlefield Dormitory is named for his wife. One Union General, A. Willich, is quoted as saying "I'd rather have been a Texas Ranger than a general in the Federal Army." On my first visit to "Six Flags Over Texas" at Arlington, TX, there was a poster encouraging enlistments in the Terry Texas Rangers in the Confederate section. Along with Hood's Texas Brigade, it is the most famous Texas outfit to serve in the Confederate Army. Major Littlefield is buried in Oakwood Cy., Austin, TX.

Below, I will identify each of the men listed in the article on page one of this writeup in turn giving what I know about them. All of this group served in Company "D".

Jesse F. Burditt, 2nd Lt. - b. 30 Sep 1829 AL, m. Sarah Ann Hornsby. He was killed in an engagement preceeding the battle of Murfreesboro, TN on 28 Dec 1862. He is buried in the Hornsby Cy.

Joseph B. Rogers - b. 1839/40 TX, son of James & Rachel Rogers, family #14, Travis Co. 1860. Mentioned in Giles book in 1863.

Thomas Bennett Banks - b. 14 Feb 1840 Huntington, Carroll Co., TN d. 30 Apr 1925 in Austin, TX and buried in the Banks-Wood Cemetery.

Leonidas Banton Giles - b. 2 Oct 1841 Montgomery, TX; lived with parents Samuel B. Giles and Elizabeth P. Banton. Lived Travis Co. 1860. Author of the book listed in the bibliogrpahy. Wounded at Woodsonville, KY 17 Dec 1861, but served out the war in the Rangers. Died at Laredo, TX 12 Jun 1922.

Charles T. Pelham - b. 1834/5 AR. Lived with his mother M. A. in Travis Co., 1860. He d. May 1864 in GA. Giles describes him as "educated" and a "Civil Engineer".

G. B. Giles, b. 1839/40 TX, brother of L. B. Giles above.

Fenton P. Bott - presumed to be the F. Bott, b. 1821/2 VA, single, living with his father L. Bott in 1860 Travis Co.,TX.

Jefferson W. Burleson - b. 11 Nov 1841 TX, d. 23 Apr 1908, i. Rogers Hill Cy., just east of Austin. Lived with his father Aaron Burleson 1860, Travis Co.

Bill Burditt - no data; presumed related to Jesse F. Burditt.

James G. Pickle - no data

John Henry - b. 1837/8 TN. Lived with his mother 1860 Travis Co.

John Davidson - b. 1843/4 TX; lived with parents Travis Co.,TX 1860.

James P. McArthur - Wounded at Aiken, SC 1865. Very likely the J. T. McArthur, b. 1841/2 TX living with James Doyle 1860 Travis Co.

Samuel Piper - no data. H. P. Piper m. Mary Ann Edmiston.

Jesse B. Rowe - son of Joseph and Savain Rowe, #133 Travis Co. 1850

J. V. Jones - b. 1842/3 TN. Lived with parents Travis Co., TX 1860 - Thomas H. & M. L. Jones. Mentioned in Giles book 1863.

W. H. Roberts - no data

Aaron Burleson - b. 1833/4 TX. Son of James Burleson and first cousin of Jefferson W. Burleson mentioned above, and living next door to him in 1860 Travis Co.

T. B. Pue - no data

William Davis - probably the W. B. Davis, b. 1837/8 GA living in household #726 1860 Travis Co., TX, single. Giles mentions his being alive in 1911.

M. E. Thomas - no data

William R. Black - He became a 2nd Lt. at Nolensville, TN in Oct 1862. He was wounded at Knoxville,TN Nov 1863.

RECORDS OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, WEBBERVILLE SOCIETY, WEBBERVILLE CIRCUIT, TEXAS CONFERENCE

The first roll was made in 1883 and is noted with "*". The final roll was dated 1924. About 1925, the church ceased to exist and members at that date are noted with "". Banks McLaurin, Sr. took the Church Register to Austin at that time, and upon his death in 1961, Banks McLaurin, Jr., inherited them. He gave the original to Southern Methodist University soon thereafter, after making a copy.

Meaning of abbreviations used:

L. enrolled or dropped out by letter to another church
R. enrolled by ritual
W. withdrew from membership, or dropped for failure to attend
Ch.Conf dropped from membership by Church Conference
Retd. restored to membership after being dropped or withdrawn
* a person on the first roll of the church 1883/4
 a person on the rolls when the church disbanded 1924
d. died
m. married
Bapt. Baptised
1888/93 a date deducted from the dates of the rolls
(see Banks/or some other name) look to this surname because the person married to/from Austin means the letter was transferred to/from this church
 licenced to preach

HISTORY OF THE MANOR CEMETERY

As related to Banks McLaurin, Jr. by Banks McLaurin, Sr.

The Manor Cemetery is located about 15 miles southeast of Austin, in Travis Co., about a half mile west of the Bastrop Co. line. It is just north of F/M Road 969 on the hill above the old Manor Store, on land settled by Joseph John Manor. Joseph and his brother James came from Tennessee about 1838. James settled on the James Manor Survey and the present town of Manor is on this site. Joseph J. Manor and a man named Frank Nash started a general store at Webberville; Joseph bought out Nash and for many years, the Manor store served the Webberville community. Today (1961) a descendant of Neill McEachern operates a store on the same site.

When Joseph J. Manor's first wife, Caroline Scott, daughter of James and Marjory Scott, died in 1851, he started the cemetery which is today called the Manor Cemetery on the hill overlooking the store. The land was inherited by his son Joseph Blake Manor, a son of his second wife, Julia Ann Forehand, daughter of Blake Forehand. Members of the Forehand family were the next to be buried in the cemetery. (Banks McLaurin, Jr. made an inventory of those buried in the cemetery in 1965 and confirmed these statements.) Other burials were from the Hamilton family. The brothers John and William are buried in it along with their families. John's wife was Lavina Scott, a sister of the above mentioned Caroline Scott. Some members of the Banks family are buried in the Manor Cy., but many are also buried in the Woods Cemetery nearby.

Banks McLaurin, Sr. married Lillian Manor, daughter of Joseph Blake Manor and her first born is buried in the cemetery, as is Lillian herself. She died in the 1918 influenza epidemic and left two daughters: Mary McLaurin, who married Richard Myles Standifer (now buried in the Manor Cemetery), and Farrior McLaurin, who married William Palmer Chrisman. They are both deceased and are buried elsewhere. Banks McLaurin, Jr. is the son of Banks McLaurin, Sr. and his second wife Evelyn Davidson.

Two veterans of San Jacinto are buried in the cemetery: George Self and John Lyle Osborn. One of the early settlers who was scalped and lived to tell the tale, Claiborn Osborn, is also buried here along with many of his descendants. Several members of the Duty family are buried in the cemetery. They were very early settlers of the Webberville area.

Note: Since I started assembling information to put in this book, I have discovered that the earliest burial with a stone took place on 15 Jun 1839. The next stone with a date is the 1851 mentioned above. There must be some unmarked ones in between these dates.

HORNSBY CEMETERY.

This cemetery is located about 3000 feet south of F.M. Road #959 from Austin to Webberville, Travis Co., Texas. It is about 3000 feet west of the intersection of F.M. #959 with F.M. #973 in the area known as Hornsby's Bend (of the Colorado River). Almost all of the people buried here are descendants of Reuben Hornsby and his wife, Sarah Morrison, who were among the very earliest settlers of this area of Texas; or Laughlin McLaurin and his wife, Margaret Morrison, who settled here about 1849. Margaret Morrison was a cousin of Sarah Morrison. Reuben and Sarah had two sons, Elisha, b. 1820, and Leonard, b. ca 1821, who died in Miss. before 1830.

The data below was gathered by Banks McLaurin, Jr., on 30 May 1965, 12 June 1965 and 10 July 1965. It has been checked and added to by Mrs. Myrtle Callan and by Miss Irma Robertson, both members of our Society and residents of Austin, Texas. I am deeply indebted to Cousin Irma for data on unmarked graves and comments below. Mrs. Callan is Secretary of the Hornsby Bend Cemetery Association set up to provide perpetual care for the cemetery. The comments under the comments column are recorded on the stone unless in parentheses -- the ones in parenthesis are either by the editor, Banks McLaurin, Jr., or Irma Robertson. Dates in parenthesis were added by the editor.

Monuments:

001. To John Williams and Howell Haggett. (Have unmarked stones at actual gravesites) Killed by Indians in May 1836 while detailed from Captain John J. Tumlinson's Company of Rangers to help protect the families of the Hornsby's settlement on return from the "run away scrape."
To William Atkinson
Pioneer Ranger buried near Daniel Hornsby when both were killed by Indians 7 June 1845.
Erected by State of Texas 1936.

002. Josephus Hornsby, 15 March 1822 - 21 March 1862, son of Reuben, settled here 1832, Bastrop Ranger 1837, in Flores Fight 1839, in Battle of Plum Creek 1840, Brushy Fight 1840, Vasquez and Woll Campaign 1842. Led fight against Indians from whom he rescued William Bell and Alexander Coleman in Austin, 1842. His wife, Eliza Ann Lane, 14 Feb 1830 - 6 Sept 1892. (See 008; he m. [1] 009, m. [2] 010.)

Most of the genealogies of the Webberville families and the families with members buried in the Manor Cemetery are the result of research done on my families: McLaurin, Banks, Hamilton, Osborn and my sisters'families: Manor, Cook, Forehand, and families which have intermarried with these. Some are from other members of the Manor Cemetery Association. These have been acknowledged and in some cases, been left just as submitted and use different systems and different abbreviations. Those done by me use a system of numbering I have used for 40 years. The earliest generation known is numbered "a.". The children of "a." are numbered"aa., ab., ac., ad.",etc. They are generally listed in known age, or assumed age, with the eldest given the number "aa." The next generation adds a letter, and so on. The following abbreviations are used:

b. = born
d. = died
m. = married
i. = interred or buried
(1) = first marriage
(2) = second marriage
p. = page number in book cited ca = about or approximated age
ac. = acres when referring to land measurement

TX, TN, KY, VA, IN = states have been abbreviated using the system used by the U.S.Postal Service

Co. = County
Cy. = cemetery

Mary Hawtrey, only dau. of Ralph Hawtrey of Rislipp, Middlesex Co., England, d. 11 Apr 1661
He owned Corfe Castle. For many years it was a Royal castle. The first recorded date in its history is 978. In 1635, the widow of Sir Christopher Hatton sold the castle to Sir John Bankes, at that time Attorney General, but who later became Chief Justice of the Common Pleas. During the English Civil War, Sir John declared for the King and was proclaimed a traitor. He died at Oxford on 28 Dec 1644, and Lady Bankes, who was at the Castle prepared for a siege. She held out in the first siege, but due to trickery, the Castle was seized during the second siege, and destroyed by the Parliamentarians. The ruins are now in the hands of the National Trust and during a recent trip to England in Oct, 1994, I had an opportunity to visit and walk through the ruins. His youngest son William came to America.

His father died in 1789 and his mother remarried to Archibald Bynum. In 1790, Thomas' brother Richard was named his guardian. Richard removed to Tennessee and George Brasfield, Jr. was named his guardian in 1802 still in Granville Co., NC. Thomas is on the 1810 tax list of Wake Co., having become of age. Thomas had removed to Kentucky by 1817 and moved on to Carroll Co., TN after a few years. In 1830, he is enumerated in Carroll Co. in the census living at Huntington, the county seat. He served as sheriff of the county 1832-1836. He was still in Carroll Co. in 1840. Between 1845 and 1846, he removed to Marshall Co., MS and was there in the 1850 census. His son John Baylor Banks had removed to Texas before 1840 and was well established there. Probably late in 1850, John had moved from Washington Co., TX to Travis Co. and bought the land of John F. Webber and was laying out Webberville. Word must have gotten to Thomas about the good fortune he was having and about 1852, Thomas and Barbara along with son Gaston Haywood Banks and family came to Texas. He had 35 slaves in the 1840 census. Deeds I have indicate that he gave half of them to his third son Thomas Randolph who remained in Mississippi. Upon reaching Travis Co., TX, Thomas gave the balance of the 35 to Gaston Haywood and he himself did not have real property or slaves when he died in 1856. When the slaves were freed in 1865, most of them took the name Banks for their surname.

In 1840, they were living with his parents, Carroll Co., TN. In 1846, they moved to Mississippi, Marshall Co. and were in the 1850 census there. On 28 Oct 1851, Thomas Banks gave his son Thomas Randolph Banks 17 slaves, apparently in anticipation of their move to Texas to join their son John Baylor Banks who had by this time bought the land from Webber and was busy with starting Webberville. On arrival in Travis Co. in 1852, Thomas Banks gave Gaston the balance of his slaves. John Baylor Banks was instrumental in organizing the Colorado Blue Lodge (Masonic) No. 96 at Webberville in 1853 and Gaston joined. Gaston's sons Thomas B. and Sidney Y. also belonged as did Thomas Gaston Banks and Hood Hamilton Banks. Hugh M. McLaurin, Banks McLaurin, Sr. and Coin McLaurin also belonged. The family belonged to the Webberville Methodist Church; when the Church disbanded in 1925, my father inherited the records and when I inherited them, I presented them to the SMU Library for their Methodist archives. These records are elsewhere in this book. Gaston Banks lived in Travis Co. in the 1860, 1870 and 1880 census.

The first positive identification of John B. Banks is in 1840 when he was county clerk of Jackson Co., TX from 11 Mar to 11 May. He received a land grant in Texas in 1845. He married in Washington Co., TX in 1844 and was on the poll list in Washington Co. 1846 and in the 1850 census also. In late 1850 or 1851, he moved to Travis Co., TX and bought out John F. Webber, opened a large farm and laid out the town of Webberville. His father and brother joined him in 1852 when they moved from Marshall Co., MS. Col. Banks was on the board of the Austin Female Academy in 1850-51. He served in the legislature from Travis Co., TX 1853. He was in Webberville in the census of 1860 and lived 6 houses from Gaston Banks. After the Civil War, he removed to Galveston and lived there until his death. In my father's files when he died was a deed signed by his widow C. C. Banks and his son in law W. H. Browning and dated 26 Feb 1901.

i. Manor Cy., Travis Co., TX (34)

During the last two years of the Civil War, he drove wagons from Mexico to Houston with supplies for the Confederate Army, and on the return trip took cotton to Mexico. After the war, he was in the wagonning and farming business with his brother Thomas B.[9]. In 1870 he was not with his parents, so apparently had married and set up housekeeping. In 1880, he lived in Bastrop Co., TX with three children; in 1900, they lived in Travis Co., TX with son Hood.

These descendants were personally known to me when I lived in Austin from 1924-1944. Other data was supplied by phone interviews and from my parents 1953-1965.

The Handbook of Texas, p. 528 has a writeup on Joseph Duty as well as George Duty. He was b. 6 Mar 1801 in TN. He was one of Austin's Old Three Hundred settlers and received a land grant in Colorado Co. 1824. The Joseph Duty Survey in what is now Travis Co. is upriver from the Webber Survey. His father in law Winslow Turner had a land grant in Bastrop Co., also. He lived in Travis Co. in the 1850 and 1860 census. He d. 11 Sep 1855 and is buried in the Manor Cy. See the next page which gives the children of Joseph Duty. The Handbook errs in that Joseph Duty is buried in the Duty Cemetery, now called the Church Cy. but his wife Louisa is buried in the Manor Cemetery. The Annals of Travis County chapter VI (1839) says that in the fall of 1839, it was announced by Joseph Duty, living at Webber's Prarie, he had purchased a cotton gin. It is believed that this was the first cotton gin ever brought to the upper Colorado. Joseph Duty was killed by a snake bite, according to his obituary in The Texas State Times of Sept. 15, 1855, p. 2

James Robert Duty, Sr., who is a Manor Cemetery Association member and has extensive records on the Duty family. The pages following are excerpted from these records.

Joseph was one of the older of eleven children of Solomon Duty, originally of North Carolina. In 1790 he is in Laurens Co., SC very near the Osborne family of Banks McLaurin, Jr.. The Dutys moved to Sumner Co., TN by 1801 and were in Indiana before coming to Texas in 1822. Solomon and the minor children and Joseph came at this time. Mathew came from Louisiana in July 1829; George came from Arkansas in 1829. The Dutys were in Austin's Old Three Hundred and the Turners were in Austin's second colony. The land grants in Bastrop Co. and what is now Travis Co. were in what is called Austin's Little Colony. Joseph and Louisa Duty are in the Travis Co., TX census of 1850 and 1860. They had twelve children:

I received a letter with a family group sheet from Margaret W. Speckels of Odessa, TX over seven years ago. She had the Duty line and also the Banks line. It turned out that her Banks line did not tie in with mine, but it is obvious that her Duty line does tie in with the Dutys of Travis Co. She gave her Duty line thus:

a. Matthew Duty
aa. William Duty, b. d. 1830 Madison Co., TN
m.
Rachel Warren
He was a Capt. in the Rev. War and served in a NH Reg.
They had the following children:
aaa. Mary Duty, m. James F. Lauderdale
aab. Elizabeth Duty, m. James H. Rogers
aac. Nicey B. Duty, m. (1) Wm. H. Smith, (2) Geo.Sheperd
aad. Ann Duty, m. (1) -- Moore, m. (2) ----- McDonald
aae. Solomon Duty
aaf. Hiram Duty, b. 1802 Caswell Co., NC
d. 1885 Travis Co., TX
m. (1) 26 Feb 1824
Emeline Banks, b. 11 Sep 1809 Garrard Co., KY
d. 6 Mar 1856 Dover, Lafayette Co..MO
m. (2) 31 Oct 1858 Travis Co., TX
Rebecca W. -----, widow of ---- Riggle, b. 1808/9 TN
Emeline was the dau. of John & Dorothy Banks.
Hiram moved from TN to MO and his wife (1) d. there.
After her death, he moved to Travis Co. and m. (2), and settled at Webberville, where he was in 1860.
aafa. William Pitts Duty, m. Sue J. --- aafb. Mary Louisa Duty, b.1834, m. Chas. Dexter Cleveland aafc. Anna Elizabeth Duty, b. Commodore Stockton aafd. Warren Littleton Duty, b. ca 1843
aafe. Ambrose Owen Duty, b. 12 May 1846 MO
m. 17 Dec 1867 Manor, TX

aaff. Robert Emmett Duty, b. 1848 MO
m.
Marcella Huckaby

Ambrose had a daughter, Daisy Abigail Duty who m. H. C. Wyatt and they were the parents of Margaret Speckels. From her information above, one would have to conclude that Hiram's father William was a brother of the Solomon Duty who moved to Texas and whose sons settled at Webberville.

a. David Edmiston, b. 1760, d. 1824

She the daughter of Nathanial Moore and Rebecca Euwin.
He was murdered in Clark Co., AR by Charles S. Cox, who was caught, tried, convicted and hung in 1832.
Nancy married (2) John B. Robinson in Arkansas and they came to Texas before 29 Oct 1835, when they bought out the widow of Mathew Duty who was killed by Indians.
The Travis Co., TX census of 1850 indicates that the Robinsons had two sons: Jeremiah W., b. 1835/6 TX and Harvy, b. 1838/9 TX. Travis Co., TX marriage records list a marriage for Jeremiah on 30 Apr 1857 to Mary A. Brewer.
After John B. Robinson's death on 15 Jun 1839, Nancy m. (3) 7 Aug 1842 Travis Co., TX, William G. Strawn, who was born in GA 1812/3. The Strawns had one son per the census of 1850: William Strawn, b. 1844/5 TX.
The earliest tombstone so far located in the Manor Cemetery is that of John B. Robinson.

aad. Nancy Edmiston, b. 1828/32 AR
Find no further data on her in Travis Co., TX Marriage Records or in the census, unless the Nancy Edmiston listed with Nancy Strawn in 1850 as 18 years old is she with the date of birth incorrect.

Note: Nathaniel Moore and wife Rebeca are #246 Travis Co. 1850.
Thomas A. Moore and family are #251 Travis Co., 1850.

James E. Edmiston served with the Rangers during the Texas Revolution. Capt. John Tumlinsons men were primarily from the Bastrop area for the protection of the settlers against the Indians. When the Alamo fell, they were assigned as rear guard to cover General Houstons retreat from Gonzales. James served as a private in Capt. Tumlinsons and Allens Volunteer Companys from the 12th day of January 1836 until the 12th day of April 1837. James was 16 years old when he entered the Ranger service.

Listed below are some of the engagements he participated in for the Republic of Texas.

*Rescued Capt. Alexander Coleman from a band of Indians.

*Under Capt. Mark Lewis, recaptured the Archives from Smith and Chandler, 1842.

*The Woll Expedition in 1842.

*Two Travis County Ranger Companies.

*From Colemans Fort, under General Edward Burleson at the battle of Plum Creek against the raiding Comanche Indians.

On June 3, 1846, James married Margaret Ann Warren at Webberville, Texas. They lived on 600 acres of land on Waller Creek, purchased from James Burleson.

In 1849, they joined Capt. Jack Hays wagon train for the Gold Rush in California. James and Margaret had two daughters, Mary Ann and Nancy. Margaret and Nancy became ill and died. Mary Ann was sent back to Texas, and raised by brother David and wife Rhoda. Mary Ann was sent to a private school. She married a Piper and taught school in Austin. Her Granddaughter Siddie Schutz resides in Waco, Texas.

In California, James married Cordelia S. Richardson. They had two sons, Charles Lee and James Euwin. Charles Lees' daughter, Viola Edmiston Weston lives in Jamestown, Calif. James was a Mason, Tuolumne Lodge No. 8 F & A M. His Masonic Sash and Apron is on display in the Masonic Lodge, Columbia, California. (National Historical Gold Mining Camp)

It was such sturdy pioneers as James E. Edmiston, who had the spirit & courage to come to the wild and barren land, and subdue the Indians and Mexicans. Thus, laying the foundation for the great State of Texas. Descendants and others are now enjoying the peaceful and cultured homes made possible by the hardships and privations of these first settlers.

Brief History of David Crawford Edmiston
March 2, 1825 - January 18, 1903

Born in Arkansas, David C. Edmiston came with his family to Texas in 1835. His Grandfather, David Edmiston of North Carolina, participated in the American Revolution. His father, Zebulon Brevard Edmiston, was a Mounted Gunman, Tennessee Volunteer's, during the War of 1812. Taking their lead, David joined Stephen F. Austin's Frontier Ranger Companies and was engaged in several Indian Battles.

During the Mexican War, Governor J. Pickney Henderson appointed David a Second Lieuentant, Capt. Grumbles Company, Bell's Mounted Volunteers of the Texas Rangers.

During the War Between the States, David was with the 33rd Texas Cavalry, Company C., Partisan Rangers of the Confederate Army.

In later years, David would welcome visitors such as Wilbarger, the Burlesons and the Hornsbys on the front porch of his frontier home where they would reminisce about their past experiences on the Texas frontier.

David married Rhoda Bowen on July 3, 1856 and they were blessed with eleven children.

His outstanding service and sacrifice on behalf of the Republic and later The State of Texas, contributed to the great heritage of this State and Nation.

From Lucile V. Cohen

a. Silam Mercer GLOVER

In late 1847 or early 1848, Silas Mercer Glover (1800 GA/1851 TX) with seven
(1) children by his deceased first wife, Jane Craft, and three small children
(2) by his deceased second wife, Sarah L. Vann, came to Travis County, TX, from Madison County, AL, with Lazarus Vann (father of Sarah L.), his two sons, Lazarus Thomas and William Jordan, and one daughter, Repsy G. Vann. These two families settled near Webberville. The following year two older married daughters of Glover arrived in Travis Co. in Nov. 1949.

Silas M. Glover purchased land in Travis, Llano and Burnet Counties, but established his homestead near Webberville and lived there until his death
(3) in 1851. He married for the third time in Travis Co., 20 Nov. 1850, Susannah Campbell, the widow of David Campbell who was killed in Mexico in 1847. Susannah had several Campbell children.

Glover died in Travis Co. in March 1851. Susannah Campbell Glover gave birth to a daughter, Mary E. Glover, a few months after the death of Silas M. When the estate was settled, Susannah relinquished her right to the lands in Burnet and Llano Counties to the minor children in exchange for a house and lot in Webberville.

Silas M. Glover was buried in the churchyard cemetery at the Ebenezer Baptist Church, Webberville. The grave was situated near the Duty plot which is enclosed in an old wrought-iron fence. Hand-carved lettering on a piece of limestone reads: Silas M. Glover Born 1800 Died 1852 Age 52. This date of death is in error. According to probate documents, Glover died in March 1851.

Susannah Campbell Glover remarried in 1856, Travis Co., Horace N. Baker, widower, and they had a son, Charles, born 1857.

Children of Silas M. Glover and first wife, Jane Craft:

aa. Elizabeth Glover, b. AL about 1824, married James Pierce, b. TN 1820. This couple had five children, and Elizabeth died by 1854 when Pierce remarried. The burial places of the Pierces have not been located, but in a ditch, flat on the ground at the northeast corer of intersection of Burleson Lane and Highway 969, two stones were found: Mary H. Pierce, 8-10-1865/5-26-1867, "Sacred to the Memory ...", and Frank, son of James C. and Mary H. Pierce, 2-17-1867/12-6-1867. Also found were broken pieces of what had been a large marble stone for George J. Glasscock (1799/1875) and his wife Ann P. Glasscock (1800/1863). These pieces were scattered throughout a pig pen at property just north of the Pierce stones. It is possible that a cemetery had existed in this area sometime before.

ab. Louisa Glover, 19 Feb. 1828, Mad. Co., AL, d. 29 Aug. 1900, TX, married in Madison Co., AL, William A. Wood, b. GA, 18 Mar. 1821, d. 20 Aug. 1877 TX, aged 56. Both are buried in the Manor Cemetery. This couple had ten children: Silas William, Elizabeth (Betty) J., Calvin Jackson, James Albert, Thomas F., Ellege, Charles M., John F., Fannie, and Cassie Jane.

Those buried in the Manor Cemetery are:

ac. Andrew J. Glover, b. 1827-28, Mad. Co., AL, m. Rachel M. Spear (Speir). Burnet Co., TX. Place, dates of death and names of children, if any, not known.

ad. Irena Glover, 1829 Mad. Co., AL/1900 Brown Co., TX, married William Jordan Vann, 1824 Mad. Co., AL/1909 Brown Co., TX, son of Lazarus Vann, in Travis Co., TX, 10 May 1848. Lived in Travis, Llano, Burnet Cos., settling in Brown Co., TX, in 1863. Both buried Zephyr, Brown Co., TX. This couple had ten children.

ae. Silas J. Glover, 10 Mar. 1831, Mad. Co., AL/1 Mar 1889, TX, m. 29 Nov. 1855, Travis Co., TX, Julia Ann Campbell, 1837/1910; both buried Manor Cemetery. Julia Ann Campbell was the daughter of Susannah Campbell who married the father of Silas J. Glover, Silas Mercer Glover. After 1976, the children of daughter, Lula Glover Watterson, placed a monument for Julia Ann next to the grave of Silas J. Their children buried in Manor Cemetery:
Clara Ellen Glover m. John William Gresham. Her stone: Clara E. Gresham 14 June 1858/23 April 1901. Her husband John W. Gresham 2 Feb. 1853/ 29 Oct 1930.
Silas E. Glover 26 Sept 1872/25 Dec 1898 (next to grave of his mother).
(Lula Glover Watterson is buried in the beautiful Watterson family cemetery on private property, Bastrop Co.)

af. Jane Ann (Jenny) Glover, b. Mad. Co., AL 1833, m. Travis Co., TX, 9 Aug 1848, Albert Brown, b. NY. Jenny was 15 years of age and Albert was 29. He was a JP in Travis Co. and was in Travis Co. in 1840 (tax records), was appointed guardian of the minor children of Silas M. Glover (with exception of Mary E.) in 1851. He performed several marriages for members of the Glover family, lived in Prec. 3, Webberville. In 1860, R. Caroline and Charles H. Glover lived with the Browns. The Browns had at least eight children. It is not known where the Browns are buried.

ag. Charles H. Glover, 1834 AL/____, lived for a time in Bastrop Co., TX, and in 1880 was in Robertson Co. with wife Mehala and 4 sons. Nothing more on this particular family.

ah. Martha E. Glover, Mad. Co., AL 6-2-1837/3-10-1911 Travis Co., m. Travis Co., 25 Apr. 1854, James Wood, 25 Dec. 1831 Mad. Co., AL/Travis Co., TX, 18 Mar, 1921. James was a brother of William Wood who married Martha's sister, Louisa. Martha E. and James Wood had eight children. They and 2 of their sons, Walter Wallace (1879/1894) and Henry Wood (1866/1896) are buried in the old Wood Cemetery just north of the Manor Cemetery.

ai. Frank M. Glover, 1839 Mad. Co., AL/_____ . No information on Frank except at the time his father died, he and his brother, Silas J., were being treated by the same physician who tended their father, Silas M.

Children of Silas Mercer Glover and second wife, Sarah L. Vann aj. R. Caroline (Callie) Glover was b. 10 July 1844, Mad. Co., AL. The date of birth on her gravestone is believed to be in error. She is buried in the Manor Cemetery near her brother, L. Benjamin T. Glover, and her stone reads: July 10, 1846/Mar. 6, 1910. Callie never married. She lived with her aunt and uncle, Repsy G. Vann and William Case until they moved to Lampasas Co. She lived with the Brown family for a time and later with Martha E. and James Wood.

ak. Sarah Catherine Glover was born in Mad. Co., AL, in 1846. On 19 Dec. 1868, Travis Co., TX, she married T.J. Standeford (also spelled in records Standefor - Standifer). In 1879 when the S.M. Glover land in Llano and Burnet Cos. was sold, Sarah Catherine Standifer was living in Williamson Co., at Liberty Hill, TX. Sarah Catherine, R. Caroline, Benjamin and Mary E. Glover issued a Power of Attorney to T.J. Standifer to sell the land in Llano and Burnet Cos. No further information on the Standifer family.

al. L. Benjamin T. Glover, Mad. Co., AL 23 April 1847/Travis Co., TX, 16 Oct 1888 (of typhoid fever) was less than one year old when the move to Texas was made. The three young Glovers were tended to by the older children, especially Irena Glover. After the death of his father, Benjamin (called Little Ben) became a ward of his half-brother-in-law, Albert Brown. When Irena and William Jordan Vann moved from Travis Co. to Packsaddle Mountain, Llano Co., Ben went with them. He called his half-sister Irena "Aunt Reeny" because her husband was his uncle. Ben was named for his grandfather, Benjamin Glover, who was a Revolutionary Soldier.

Little Ben remained with the Vanns until they moved to Brown Co. in 1863. Returned to Travis Co. and married Ella Hart. This couple had no children, and after his death, Ella moved to Brown Co. where she had relatives. Benjamin Glover is buried in the Manor Cemetery, and Ella is buried in Brownwood.

am. Mary E. Glover was b. July 1851, Travis Co., after the death of her father. She lived in Webberville with her mother and after her mother married Horace N. Baker. Mary E. continued to live with her mother. She remained single. She shared in the proceeds of the sale of the S.M. Glover land in Llano and Burnet Cos. Nothing more is known of this family.

Note: In the 1850 Census of Travis Co.:
Family #11. is Albert Brown
#14. is Wm. Wood
#23. is James Pierce
#45. is Silas M. Glover
#46. is William Vann

He entered the service in the War of 1812, and by Feb 1813, he was a Captain in the 3rd Reg. of Ohio Militia under Col. James Mills when it marched to Ft. Meigs. On 4 May 1813, Gen. Wm. Henry Harrison to deliver verbal orders to Gen. Green Clay, then approaching Ft. Meigs. On this dangerous mission, he was shot through the left knee and left permanently disabled. He was place on the pension rolls. His pension file is #)W15468 in the National Archives. He and his family moved to Terra Haute in 1816 and was one of the organizing county commissioners. Sometime prior to 2 May 1835, he moved to Texas with his sons James, William, and Alexander. According to records in the General Land Office in Austin, he served in the Texas Army despite his disability and for this service, his heirs receoved a league and a labor of land in Robertson Colony, Brazoria Co., TX. His son John Hamilton, III, came to Texas in late 1836 or early 1837. His daughter Mary came somewhat later. He died intestate. William Hamilton, his son, was made administrator of his estate by the court. On petition of the other children on 19 May 1837, William was released as administrator and commissioners were appointed to oversee partitioning of the estate. This is of record in Vol. B, p. 68, Probate Minutes of Brazoria Co., TX. The earliest tax rolls of Bastrop Co., TX in 1838 list all four sons.

William Hamilton and his wife Louisa Hill Osborn

William Hamilton bought 1111 ac. of land in the Solomon Duty Heirs Survey in Bastrop Co., TX on the Colorado River from William Duty on 12 Jan 1838 and paid $1500 for it.

The application for the marriage license of William Hamilton and Louisa Osborn is dated 14 Mar 1838 Brazoria Co., TX and is found on p. 9 of Marriage Records of Early Texas 1824-1846. Louisa's name is misspelled AUSBORN.

Since there is no known connection between the Hill family and the Osborn family, it is probable that she took the middle name Hill because Col. Wm. G. Hill and wife Eliza reared her in Matagorda after her parents died.

In 1832 James Manor built a log cabin for a home on the east bank of Gilleland Creek about a half mile from the town of Manor, which was named for him. On 27 Sep 1841, James Manor received two grants of land patented in his name which embraced the land on which the cabin was built. The cabin was incorporated into the house above in 1841 and became the kitchen. It remained in the posession of his second wife and widow until her death in 1941. This house served as the first post office of Manor and a stage stand out of Austin on the Austin-Houston road. In a history of James Manor by his great grand daughter Thelma Rogers Cook in the Austin History Center, she says that in 1832, President Andrew Jackson commissioned Samuel Houston to negotiate a treaty with Indian tribes in Texas and James Manor was one of the men he selected to accompany him on this mission. James Manor remained away from his family for three years and in 1835 returned to Tennessee for them. In 1836, he brought his wife and two daughters back to Texas along with his brother Joseph J. Manor, and others in the family. His wife Phebe had apparently returned to Tennessee due to Indian problems in Texas.

Joseph John Manor was born in Rutherford Co., TN 5 Jun 1818. In 1838 he came to Texas. He had heard stories of the frontier life and boylike, had been lured by them. He did not leave home by his father's consent, for he had hoped to make a lawyer of the lad and had arranged with one of his friends in Memphis to take him into his law office. Therefore, the boy left with little money, having only what he had himself earned. He took a boat down the Mississippi River, and landed in what is now know as Houston, then not even surveyed as a town. While he was still on the boat, Samuel Houston came on board and asked permission to look over the log book. When he came across the name 'Manor', he asked to have him pointed out. He learned that he was the son of Mills Manor, an old friend, and that this tall lad was the little fellow who had often ridden with him in Tennessee, the one he had called 'Little Joe'. Houston found that Joseph had almost no money; he insisted on sending him to a hotel and paying his expenses which he did. Later he was repayed every cent. The boy knew a little engineering and got a position in helping to survey the city of Houston. He was in Houston three or four years, and later moved to Webber's Prarie, now Webberville. Here he established a small store - the goods he hauled from Houston by teams of oxen and frontier freighting wagons. Sometimes during this trip for supplies, he would be attacked by Indians, and even near his home, the settlers would have trouble with them. He was twice married, first to Caroline Scott on 2 Jun 1847 by whom he had three children: Texana, Josephine Caroline and James Scott. The second time, he married my grandfather julia Ann Forehand. They had eleven children. He was a slave holder and a captain in the Civil War. He was widely known for his hospitality and generous heart, as well as for his stern manner and proud bearing. He was a Christian gentleman in the truest sense. He died 12 Jun 1884.

The above life history of Joseph John Manor was written by Lillian Manor McLaurin, wife of Banks McLaurin, Sr., and daughter of Joseph Blake Manor, a son of Joseph John Manor.

Hugh lived with his parents in Marlboro Co., S.C. in the census of 1850 and 1860.

In 1869, he and a group of young Scotsmen came to Texas from Marlboro Co., S.C. In this group were:
Hugh W. McColl, b. 1844, d. 1870, i. Hornsby Cy.
John T. McColl, cousin of Hugh W., who went into business with Hugh McLaurin; m. and had no children
John L. McInnis who m. his cousin Emma Case, both being first cousins of Hugh McLaurin thru their mother.
Miles M. McInnis, a brother of John L., who lived in Austin.
Neill McEachern, whose sister Margaret m. Neill C. McLaurin, brother of Hugh, and whose sister Effie Jane m. Neill D. McLaurin, first cousin of Hugh.

1870: have not located Hugh in the census, but he was in Travis Co. It was in 1870 that Angus McEachern, bro. Of Neill came to join the group from S.C. He came by train to Manor; as he walked to Webberville, he ran into Hugh McLaurin enroute to his brother Neill's place.

1880: Hugh was living with John L. McInnis and family - a boarder and merchant as was John T. McColl. They owned the general store at Webberville together. Angus McEachern was living with his brother Neill.

1886: he m. Beulah Banks. He had by this time gone into the farming business aswell as owning a gin for cotton.

They were Methodists. Hugh had been a Presbyterian, but there was no Presbyterian Church in Webberville - only a Methodist and a Baptist.

Banks was educated in the Webberville school; came into Austin and went to High School where he graduated valedictorian and received a scholarship to the Univ. of Texas which he attended 1906-1911 graduating with a BSCE. He was in the cotton ginning business with Lillian's father Joseph Blake Manor at Webberville, and owned farms. After Lillian's death, her children were reared by her parents until their deaths when they came to live with Banks and Evelyn.

Evelyn was teaching school at the Normal School in San Marcus at the time of her marriage. Banks came into Austin in 1925 and began to teach Civil Engineering at the Univ. of Texas and get his Master's. He received his MSCE in 1928 and eventually became a Professor of CE and later Mechanics at UT. He was a member of the Blue Lodge at Webberville and the Shrine Temple in Austin. They belonged to the University Methodist Church in Austin.

Their first child was born in NC 1808. By 1810 when they had the second child,they were in SC. By 1812 when the third child was born, they were back in NC and remained there until all the children were born - the last being 1833. They probably lived Richmond Co. all this time.

Probably about 1838 they came to MS when "Hurricane" Daniel McLaurin and others came. They settled near Jackson, Rankin Co., MS. "Hurricane" Daniel's son John William's widow Lydia later moved to Hornsby Bend. Dau. Rachel m. in Rankin Co. 1845.

About 1849 or early in 1850, they removed to Travis Co., TX to join his wife's sister and her husband, Reuben Hornsby, who settled the Hornsby Bend aree which lies on the Coloredo R. between Webberville and Austin, the Co. seat of Travis Co.

The oldest child, Jennet remained back in NC; daughter Margaret who m. Duncan McInnis remained back in SC, but their sons John L. and Miles M. did come to join the group. All of the other children came to Texas. In 1850 they all lived in the Hornsby Bend area of Travis Co. Accoring to MSS #6, Laughlin and family left from Texas from the home of "Speckled' Duncan McLaurin (8-bgf.) who lived in Simpson Co., MS.

About 1868, a group of young unmarried Scots all came to Travis Co. to join their relatives. Probably the aftermath of the Civil War -much worse in SC than in TX - was one of the reasons. Then,too, some of those who came were younger sons and not due to inherit the family farms.

The group of young Scots who came were: Hugh M. McLaurin, the grandfather of the compiler of this history, John Thomas McColl who went into the cotton ginning business with Hugh M. McLaurin, his brother Hugh W. McColl, Miles Murdoch McInnis and his brother (twin) John Laurin McInnis, sons of Margaret McLaurin who m. Duncan McInnis and lived in Marion Co., SC, and Neill McEachern who was a brother in law of Hugh M. McLaurin and a year or so later, his brother Angus Innis McEachern came. These men settled either at Hornsby Bend or at Webberville or in between. Webberville was founded in 1851 by John Baylor Banks, uncle of Thomas Bennett Banks whose dau. Beulah Banks m. Hugh M. McLaurin.

BENJAMIN AND LEAH STARK OSBORN

OSBORNS COME TO COUNTY IN 1825; LIVE HERE CONTINUOUSLY 130 YEARS

The Osborn family, members of which have lived continuously in Bastrop County for approximately 130 years, is descended from Benjamin Osborn and his wife, Leah Stark, who came to Texas in 1825. I have seen the original certificate of character, required of all Stephen F. Austin's Colonists, and the list of their children and dependents enscribed in the Spanish records in the Texas State Archives.

The signature of Benjamin Osborn is found with 48 others on pages 56 and 57 of the volume, "Manuscrip Letters and Documents of Early Texians 1821-1845," a facsimile folio collection of original documents published by Steck Company. These resolutions read in part: "We, the undersigned citizens of Austin's Colony of the District of Mina, convened at the house of Bartlett Simms of said District, on the 4th day of January, 1827, unanimously resolved: 1. To support the Mexican Constitution . . . 2. We feel deeply incensed at the conduct of those Americans at Nacodoches . . . etc."

Earliest records of the family are in the Matagorda section where the couple's youngest child, Claiborne, was born and where the children attended a school on the bay, well-remembered for the alligator episode. The children took milk to school and when Claiborne took his bottle to the water's edge to wash it "an alligator came up and grabbed him by the knee and he punched the alligator in the eye and made him turn loose." It is said that a man in the community did not believe the children's story, so he went down and held a bottle in the water's edge and the alligator came up and bit off a finger.

When the heirs of Claiborne Osborn sold in 1950 the last remaining portion of the original headright league situated in Bastrop and Travis Counties, it was the first transfer out of the Osborn family of that portion of land since the contract was made November 3, 1832, in "The Town of San Felipe de Austin . . . whereby the heirs of Benjamin Osborn (who had died in 1829, his wife in 1828) were to . . . obtain the title for the league of land selected and which is situated in the Colony that Hon. Estephen Austin is authorized to establish above the Bexar Road." The land was selected and the contract was signed under the laws of the Republic of Texas, November 20, 1837, bearing the number "21". It was said in 1950, to be the shortest abstract covering that period of time on record.

The partition deed of the Benjamin Osborn Headright League, of record in Bastrop County, shows the signatures of John Lyle Osborn, Thomas Osborn, Claiborn Osborn, William Hamilton and wife Louisa (Osborn), and George W. Tilley, husband of Adeline Osborn, by his attorney in face, William Hamilton, under date of 29th January, 1847. Witnesses were James S. Dodd and Noah Smithwick , the famous historian whose volume "The Evolution of a State," is considered the best authority on Colonial Texas.

Two other children were Charles, who died in infancy, and Mariah H., whose marriage to Joseph William Page on July 24, 1834, is of record in Brazoria County.

From:
Bastrop (Texas) Advertiser Homecoming Edition, August 2, 1956.

The children of Benjamin Osborne and Leah Stark are listed below. Note that the "e" has been dropped because the family dropped the "e" after coming to Texas.

Came to Texas with his mother and siblings in 1827, settling first in Austin's Colony near the Fort Bend-Brazoria Co. line. In 1828, they moved to what was then called Barker's Bend on the Colorado River, about five miles above Bastrop. He was in Houston's army at San Jacinto and in numerous Indian campaigns. He and his mother received land grants on the Bastrop/Travis Co. line today (then in Bastrop Co.), just north of the Hrs. of Benjamin Osborn Survey which lies just north of the town of Webberville. After his wife's death, James W. moved to Lampassas and lived there until his death.
